I'm a problem-solver first, designer second. I've spent 10+ years figuring out what clients actually need, not just what they ask for, and translating that into work that holds up. I don't bluff my way through gaps; I find the answer and get it done. If you're looking for someone who shows up, communicates clearly, and takes the work seriously without taking herself too seriously, I'd love to connect.

Over the past decade, I've worked with churches, law firms, nonprofits, and small businesses across the Carolinas, handling everything from brand identity and website design to print collateral and photography. The work looks different every time, but the goal is always the same: design that actually serves the people using it.
