

WAGWISE

Breed Guide

Cavoodle
The Cuddly Companion

Cavoodle - The Cuddly Companion

Breed History & Personality Traits

The Cavoodle, also known as the Cavapoo, is a cross between the Cavalier King Charles Spaniel and the Poodle. They are affectionate, intelligent, and low-shedding, making them one of Australia's most popular designer dog breeds.

Exercise, Grooming & Training Needs

Cavoodles need 30–60 minutes of daily exercise, regular brushing 3–4 times per week, and professional grooming every 6–8 weeks. They are intelligent and respond well to positive reinforcement training.

Family & Lifestyle Suitability

Cavoodles are excellent family dogs, great for kids, seniors, and singles alike. They thrive in apartments but dislike being left alone for long periods.

Common Health Considerations

Cavoodles may inherit conditions like Mitral Valve Disease, hip dysplasia, progressive retinal atrophy, and luxating patella. Choose reputable breeders and schedule regular vet check-ups.

Max's No-Nonsense Advice

Start training early, brush frequently, and be ready for a clingy companion who loves to be with you 24/7. Don't fall for the puppy eyes – they'll rule your house if you let them!