Phoenix

VALLEY OF THE SUN

Did you know...

Phoenix is located in the Sonoran Desert, a piece of land that covers approximately 100,000 square miles and includes most of the southern half of Arizona, Southeastern California, most of the Baja California peninsula, the Gulf of California, and a significant portion of Sonora, Mexico.

The History Of Phoenix

The history of the city of Phoenix begins with Jack Swilling, a Confederate veteran of the Civil War. In 1867 he saw in the Salt River Valley a potential for farming, much like that already cultivated by the military further east, near Fort McDowell. He formed a small community formed that same year about 4 miles (6 km) east of the present city. Lord Darrell Duppa suggested the name “Phoenix”, as it described a city born from the ruins of a former civilization.

The town grew during the 1870s. By 1875, the town had a telegraph office, sixteen saloons, and four dance halls. The coming of the railroad in the 1880s was the first of several important events that revolutionized the economy of Phoenix. Phoenix became a trade center, with its products reaching eastern and western markets. The territorial capital was moved from Prescott to Phoenix in 1889.

On February 14, 1912, Phoenix became the capital of the newly formed state of Arizona, on August 11, 1911, a joint resolution giving Arizona statehood. After statehood, Phoenix’s growth started to accelerate.

During World War II, Phoenix’s economy shifted to that of a distribution center, rapidly turning into an embryonic industrial city with mass production of military supplies. There were 3 air force fields in the area.

In 1948 high-tech industry, which would become a staple of the state’s economy, arrived in Phoenix. High-tech companies such as Intel and McDonnell Douglas set up manufacturing operations in the Valley.

By 1950, over 105,000 people lived within the city. The 1950s growth was spurred on by advances in air conditioning, which allowed both homes and businesses to offset the extreme heat known to Phoenix during its long summers.

Over the next several decades, the city and metropolitan area attracted more growth and became a favored tourist destination for its exotic desert setting and recreational opportunities. The 1960s saw many buildings constructed as the city expanded rapidly.

In the 1970s the downtown area experienced resurgence, with a level of construction activity not seen again until the urban real estate boom of the 2000s. By the end of the decade, Phoenix adopted the Phoenix Concept 2000 plan which split the city into urban villages,] each with its own village core where greater height and density was permitted, further shaping the free-market development culture.

Phoenix has maintained a growth streak in recent years, growing by 24.2% before 2007. This made it the second-fastestgrowing metropolitan area in the United States following only Las Vegas. In 2008. Recently Downtown Phoenix and the central core have experienced renewed interest and growth, resulting in numerous restaurants, stores and businesses opening or relocating to central Phoenix.
