

Hello!

Welcome to the first edition of The Tooker Take, a quick look at what we're doing on the campaign trail, what we're hearing from voters, and what's ahead.

On the Road

Seven weeks in, and I've been putting a lot of miles on my truck, traveling across Connecticut and meeting people where they are. From Danbury and New Canaan to Hartford, Waterbury, and New Haven, I've been at RTC meetings, community events, and small business gatherings talking directly with voters. What I'm hearing is consistent: people want accountability, transparency, and someone they trust watching how their tax dollars are spent. That's exactly why I'm running. Some of the best moments have been the simple ones: conversations after events, hearing from business owners about what they're facing, and listening to families who just want the government to work better.

In the News

We've also started to build momentum in the media.

I joined News 12's Power & Politics with Mark Sudol to talk about why the Comptroller's role matters, and how it impacts everyday Connecticut families, from state spending to long-term financial stability. This is just the beginning. We're continuing to expand our media outreach in the coming weeks to make sure voters understand what this office does and why it matters.

Campaign Series

We also launched our first campaign video series: "What is a Comptroller?"

The goal is simple, break down the role in a way that's clear and accessible. Most people don't wake up thinking about the Comptroller, but this job plays a critical role in how our state manages money and plans for the future. There are six episodes, so you'll be seeing more of these videos rolling out soon. Please follow the campaign on social media to see the series.

How You Can Help

I'm grateful for the support so many of you have already shown.

If you haven't had a chance yet, there are a few easy ways to get involved:

- Make a contribution to help us keep building momentum.
- Volunteer and join us on the trail.
- Share our message with friends and neighbors.

Thank you, and I hope to see you out there soon.

Best,
Jen
