The most common question asked of us is what do I do when my loved one has passed away?

1. Get a legal pronouncement of death. If no doctor is present, you'll need to contact someone to do this:

If the person dies at home under hospice care, call the hospice nurse, who can declare the death.

If the person dies at home without hospice care, call 911.

2. Have the hospital, hospice or other care provider contact us at the above phone numbers and we will then begin care of your family.

When a family member has passed away, one phone call to the funeral home will begin our care of your family.

The funeral service serves as a celebration of the deceased's life and is an important part of the grieving and healing process when someone we love has passed on.

They help us accept the reality of the death.

They are a time of remembrance of our loved ones.

They provide opportunity for moral support from family and friends.

They provide a chance for goodbyes.

There are a few major differences between burial and cremation options. Burial will require the purchase of a cemetery space, a monument/marker, cemetery opening/closing fees and in some certain instances an outer burial container. Cremation may require these if you choose to place the cremated remains in a traditional burial space including niches. Both choices require the purchase of a container for the deceased and both choices can be done with or without any viewing or visitation and with or without any public/private ceremony.
