A Playground For Art — The Story Behind Paper Collective.

Elevated art for everyday spaces.

Since 2013, Paper Collective's Copenhagen home has been a Playground for Art. A safe space where creatives from all backgrounds can come together to collaborate, create and share their work with our global community of art lovers.

Alongside each artist, architect, and designer - Paper Collective has created a collection of original art prints and art solutions, all at a great price. Our collection contains a diversity that allows each artist to shine yet has a distinct language that ties the collection together. Proudly produced in-house in Denmark, our art prints are made-to-order according to the Giclée fine art printing method.

The Collector — Spring Summer Collection 2026.

News SS26.

Inspired by the vinyl diggers and bibliophiles — the seekers of culture and sub-culture, Paper Collective presents their Spring Summer 2026 art collection. Analogue and textural, this collection spans from grainy photography to dreamy painting, graphic floral universes and angular abstraction. Tune out and get lost in original works crafted by twelve distinct artists from across the globe. These works create the perfect company for a day in bed, listening to your favourite record and getting lost in a work of fiction. Read on to indulge in some of The Collector's favorite tracks this season.

Track #1 — Angular Abstraction.

From the strict lines of Manuela Guidarini to the soft layering's of Karolina Székely, the grainy rainbow haze of Kasper Plougmand and Jon Harvey's mix of expression and geometry - Paper Collective's Spring Summer 2026 collection covers abstraction in all its forms.

“Order Up celebrates diner food as comfort — nostalgic, excessive, and deeply familiar. Inspired by North American roadside diners and late-night stops, each piece captures the quiet romance of these spaces: the pastel gleam of laminate counters, the soft hum of neon, the endless refill of a warm cup. Through familiar iconography the series reflects on the aesthetics of a bygone era and the enduring fascination of diner food as a cultural symbol for a simpler time.”

At Home With — Signe Dejgaard Jensen

Paper Collective visited the serene and thoughtfully curated 1970s home of Signe, a graphic designer and art director with a deep appreciation for storytelling, architecture, and everyday rituals. We spoke with her about balancing creative work and family life, living with original mid-century details as a modern family.

Distinct by Mae Studio

Hi Signe, thank you for inviting Paper Collective into your home. Could you tell us a little about yourself?

Sure! It was a pleasure having you over. My name is Signe, I'm 35, with a background as art director and graphic designer within interior brands, corporate companies and design agencies. I split my time between creative work and family life, and I'm deeply interested in how design, storytelling and everyday rituals shape both spaces and wellbeing. I work with branding and visual communication, and at home I'm constantly mixing my roles: creative problem-solver, curator of spaces, and being a mom of our two daughters. I love simplicity, aesthetics with a purpose, and design that feels both considered and alive.

Could you share with us the journey to finding your home and how it is to live in a 70's home as a modern family with kids?

We were drawn to houses from the 1970's, because we love both the architecture and interiors from that time-period. It was love at first sight when we saw our house, it had character, generous light, and the selection of untouched materials and layout that felt like home.

Living here with kids is a beautiful balance of past and present. It reminds me of a simpler time, and when we are here, it feels like everything slows down. The house has big common spaces that lets everyday life unfold freely, and the view from all rooms makes me feel close to nature. We've embraced the original elements, like the warm wood tones and wide windows, and paired them with a curated selection of furniture, art and details that make it feel lived-in and intentional. It's a home that will keep growing with us, for many years to come.

Grinning Frog by Aniek Bartels

Leopards by Aniek Bartels

Tell us about your process of selecting artworks and how they pair with the interior and materials/colours in your home?

Art in our home is chosen much like everything else in the house. I look for pieces that catches my eye and feels intuitive. I'm mostly drawn to more graphic artworks that can be both abstract and very expressive. I love that you can create a feeling or a mood from simple shapes and a minimal colour-palette. To create harmony and rhythm, it feels natural to select artworks with a more tones down colour-palette as we have a lot of bold materials and surfaces in our house. I don't try to pair artworks with our furniture, but aim to create a visually coherent experience instead.

You've chosen a large artwork for your living room that complements the space beautifully. What advice would you give to someone who feels intimidated by scale and is hesitant to commit to a larger piece in their home?

Don't be afraid of being bold. A large piece doesn't have to dominate, it can actually create a feeling of more breathing room. Think in proportion: a piece that's too small can feel lost, several artworks on the same wall can easily feel busy and noisy, while a larger one can make the room feel calm and intentional. Art in a bigger scale can feel more like a part of the architecture and can hold the room together rather than just being a wall decoration. Trust your eye, and play around.

What do you enjoy doing in your spare time that inspires or influences your creative work?

In my spare time I try to fill my time with creative activities that slow me down and sharpen my attention like drawing or sewing. I love yoga, long walks in the forest near our home, and quiet mornings with a notebook. Being present with my daughters, noticing how they play and create stories, feeds directly back into my creative thinking. Inspiration for me often arrives in the small, unplanned moments, or when you are busy doing something completely different. I try to fill my time with activities that don't involve screens as much as possible, and the house itself feels like a quiet reminder of a time, where life felt a little slower and simpler.

At Home with — Nicoline Steen Murphy

The eclectic and colourful Copenhagen apartment of journalist Nicoline Steen Murphy and her musician husband Cillian. We spoke to them about their love for local music, Japan and expressive interiors.

Artwall Curation by Nicoline Steen Murphy

Hi Nicoline, can you start by telling me about your home - where you are situated in Copenhagen and what you love about your part of town?

We live in a 38-square-meter apartment in Østerbro, close to Bopa Plads, Nordre Frihavsgade, Fælledparken, and Nordhavn. I really love the calm, local vibe of the neighborhood, even though it's in the middle of the city. Everything is within walking distance, whether it's grocery shopping, watching football or going out for dinner. This part of town is developing really fast - especially Nordhavn - and it's becoming more and more exciting to live here. In my humble opinion, Østerbro has some of the best bakeries, restaurant and takeaway spots, convenience stores, old-school pubs, and modern taprooms.

I know you are both lovers of local culture and music in particular. Can you tell me about some of your favourite local bands, and venues in and around Copenhagen?

It's an ever-evolving list, really. However, the new Soleima record is really brilliant, but we have also been listening to a broad variety of artists like Solkur, Barcelona, MAS and more recently the young grunge upcomers from Ashes of Billy. Also honorable mentions to acts such as NAR and Lauge Heebøll, who are part of Cillian's music studio collective Pale Pond. In Copenhagen we are blessed with a very solid culture for live music and gigs. We always love attending shows at VEGA's different venues in Vesterbro, but included to the list of frequent visits is our new local venue Nordhus alongside trusted spots such as Byhaven during summer, Hotel Cecil, and even La Fontaine for live jazz and old school vibes.

I also know you were recently married in a quite unique way (Congratulations!!). Can you tell me about the unique way you both tied-the-knot?

Most certainly. We got married as part of the Golden Days festival, which meant that the author and psychologist Glenn Bech was in charge of the ceremony at the wonderful Ordrupgaard just North of the city. We had our closest friends and family join the celebrations, where we had the most beautiful Indian summer weather, two huge, colourful over-the-top wedding cakes and obviously bubbly wine for days. The party continued at our local bar Café Bopa with vinyl DJ'ing, dancing and laughter through the night. It was a magical day - full of colours, Japanese vibes, culture, music, food and drinks - just in our spirit.

Thank you for letting Paper Collective into your lovely apartment. Can you tell me about how you have styled your home and some of your most loved objects?

Our home is styled in an eclectic, bold, personal, and fun way. Every item is carefully curated either from our many travels to East Asia, by designers we love, bands we listen to, or simply because it sparks joy. My number one favourite piece in the apartment is our green sofa and matching footrest from the Danish brand Sofacompany. I love the bold, exaggerated colour combined with the simple - yet original - shape. A clash of styles which is a principle I always come back to when decorating.

Absorb PB 03 by Lex Pott,
Pots & Vases by Jaime Hayon

Albufeira by Adrianna Matzeg,
Un Merle Art Tray by Line Hachem

Your selection of artworks and frames from Paper Collective accentuates your love of colour. Can you tell me about some of the pieces you have chosen for your space?

My two favorite pieces are Absorb Yo O4 by Lex Pott with the matching duo-tone frame and Vinyl Shop by Line Hachem in a solid oak frame. Both of the artworks match our love of colour, however in two very different ways. The lavish ombre tones in Absorb are very futuristic, and nostalgic at the same time. The vibrant colours give an Ettore Sottsass kinda vibe, and as a big fan of the 80s Memphis Milano era, I'm bound to love this kitschy piece.

Vinyl Shop is completely different. Made with soft coloured pencils, the motif underlines our passion for both music and vinyl records. Somehow the artwork also reminds me of Japan. Maybe it's the way people act. Everyone in the shop is alone. Even though they are absorbed in all the pressed pieces, they are nevertheless alone in the crowd. Very Japanese. Please watch the documentary "Dear Tomorrow" from 2025 which is about the loneliness pandemic in Japan and in the modern world in general.

Can you share any secrets with our community when it comes to creating a gallery wall within their own homes?

I really like when things are not too symmetrical or strict. That being said, I've learned that a gallery wall needs some aligned lines and even spacing so the overall look doesn't get too messy. I would always recommend combining different sizes and shapes when decorating a wall. Both when it comes to the art itself and the frames. For instance, we have incorporated everything from shelves, lamps, and ceramics to Japanese Noh masks, mirrors, and vases. It makes the wall feel more dynamic and the whole look more personal and unique. Let the wall's aesthetics both reflect your interior style and you as a person, then you won't grow tired of it as easily.

Roar
by Marina Ayashiro

Art for the whole family.

With MADO, Paper Collective curates a collection of educational, kind, loving and well-made products based on iconic graphics and poetic illustrations. The name MADO is Japanese for window, and we want our artworks to act as a window to the world for your children. A window that provides insight, outlook and through which many an adventure awaits. Play, Live, Dare and Love with MADO.

SS26 New Collection

Japanese artist Marina Ayashiro returns to the MADDO collection with a joyful new series of seven art prints, each defined by her playful characters and uplifting color palettes. From smiling suns and gentle clouds to expressive animals and whimsical ice creams, the collection captures a wide range of moods—from calm and soothing to bold and energetic. Bright contrasts, soft tones, and charming details come together to create prints that radiate warmth, optimism, and a lighthearted sense of fun, making this collection a cheerful addition to any space.
