Welcome

Welcome to the
7th Annual High School
Visual Arts Exhibition!

After having the exhibition online during COVID, we are back on site in the new Ford Family Gallery.

Thank you to the high schools and homeschools that participated. We celebrate the hard work from students, teachers and parents!

This year 141 pieces were selected for the show. Every year we are amazed at the quality of work and the talent exhibited by the students. Please notice the moving artist statements on the labels.

The show will be online at www.WhiteBearArts/Exhibitions and the award show will be live-streamed on Facebook for those who do not have the opportunity to attend in person.

Over the past year, I have been working to explore the color in my culture. Many of my pieces investigate how color influences the everyday items in my life. I have also been working on expanding my digital editing skills. In every piece I make, it is important that my message is loud and clear. I hope that these pieces do my goal justice.

Art has always been my escape from reality. No matter where I am, time seems to stop when I create art. Art has taught me to try new things and take new risks. I enjoy experimenting with different forms of media and want to showcase this through my submitted work. Using my art I want to be able to connect with the community that surrounds me and help shed light on their thoughts and feelings.

As an artist, I enjoy searching for scenes with captivating lines and textures. My artwork reflects the importance of every single mark on a surface and the process these marks go through to form a cohesive and comprehensible image. My favorite mediums are scratchboard and ink because I believe I'm able to achieve the most detail with these materials.

In my artwork, the vibrant, abstract colors, and textured brush strokes represent love and the purpose it can bring to life. In contrast, the tired, gray pencil shows a loss of identity as passions gradually fade. Though I am most comfortable with pencil, I pushed myself into using color to emphasize contrast and tone. I very much enjoyed experimenting with the layering, texture, and shades of colors in acrylic.

My name is Nicholas Ottem. I work to create art with deeper meanings that may come off as controversial. In order to get the attention of the people, my art is curated to entice them in the vibrant colors and deep contrast that I use. The main point of my artistic process is to make people stop and question their form of interpretation on topics such as gender and the social hierarchy.

In my art, I intend to convey the intense and conflicting emotions and meanings that is seen within human nature, through the use of color and painting. I choose to portray the aspects of emotions within humans because it is something that has fascinated me with the ambiguousness and intricacy in the feelings that we all share. Also, through using colors I am able to show the contrast and similarity in these emotions and meanings.

If I can't be as good as nature, I'll settle for second place.

When painting landscapes, I try to show the beauty and pureness of nature and living things, highlighting different colors and sunlight. Part of my painting process is to step back and imagine myself inside my painting with my eyes closed, arms outstretched - feeling the sense of freedom and happiness from disconnecting from the world. Painting, for me, is a release of stress and an escape to a landscape, inviting the viewer to experience as well.

Art for me is to take an idea, a feeling, and share it with whomever sees it. I want to be able to transport the audience into an interesting mindscape: one of mystery and curiosity. I want them to ponder concepts and see value in their thoughts. Often I feel art can be too forthcoming and swift to conclusion. My goal for you, the viewer, is to make a story. This sculpture is representing the human body of a ballerina. Unfortunately, it is common for dancers to struggle with body dysmorphia and/or an eating disorder. I really emphasized the ribs to show the danger dancers portray just to look and feel beautiful. Although this is a touchy subject, I believe it is important to be addressed. Your body does not define your worth. Anyone can do whatever they aspire to do.
