Session Type: Critical Conversation
Session title: Equity in Action: DEI, Sport, and Athlete Mental Health Amid Sociocultural and Legal Changes
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 105
Division: 47 - Society for Sport, Exercise and Performance Psychology
Addressing diversity, equity, and inclusion are important areas as it relates to professional practice within the domains of psychology (APA, 2021), sport psychology (Ryba et al., 2024), and psychiatry (Moreno & Chhatwal, 2020). However, in recent years, the advancement of diversity and inclusion and the pursuit of equity have become more challenging in various societal domains (e.g., education, corporate settings, etc.) as recent legal, political, and sociocultural changes have significantly impacted traditional DEI initiatives (Follmer et al., 2024). In this session, the presenters, a sport psychiatrist and a sport psychologist, will examine the effects of these changes specifically within the context of sport, discussing the potential impact on individuals, teams, and organizations. They will share examples highlighting how some organizations have maintained progress toward fairness despite the shifting landscape around DEI and lead attendees in a discussion about some of the challenges related to promoting inclusion and equity while also reaffirming the importance of these goals. Presenters will address the intersection of mental health and systemic inequities, focusing on innovative, inclusive approaches in underserved athletic communities and share strategies to facilitate fairness, access, and opportunity for athletes and others within the sport system. Through presentations and interactive small and large group discussions, participants will explore ways to design and implement inclusive mental health interventions, at the individual and organizational level, to support those most affected by systemic barriers while aligning with current regulations. Attendees will leave with actionable tools to address, promote, and advance DEI without compromising their values or legal compliance.

Session Type: Symposium
Session title: Nature, Stress, and Resilience: Bridging Trauma Healing, Ecological Insights, and Daily Interactions
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Terrace Level, Bluebird Ballroom 3A
Division: 34 - Society for Environmental, Population and Conservation Psychology
This session presents a collection of three studies which highlight the complex interplay between nature, mental health, and resilience. Research in Haiti underscores the importance of trauma-informed strategies to address climate-induced psychological challenges. Studies on young adults with substance use disorders reveal that nature contact can influence negative affect, with greater exposure yielding emotional benefits. A daily diary study demonstrates that time in nature reduces stress demands and enhances coping resources, regardless of nature connectedness. Together, these findings emphasize the therapeutic potential of nature for fostering resilience and well-being across diverse populations and contexts.

Session title: Navigating Educational Paradigms: Parental Involvement, Decolonization, and Student-Readiness

Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 603

Division: 15 - Educational Psychology

This session delves into diverse educational paradigms with presentations on the critical role of parental involvement in schools, the decolonization of education in India, and the concept of student-ready colleges. It will explore how different demographic and cultural contexts shape parental engagement, examine India's National Education Policy (NEP) 2020 as a tool for decolonizing education, and critically evaluate the shift towards making colleges more responsive to the needs of contemporary students. Attendees will engage in interactive discussions, gaining insights into implementing these frameworks across various educational landscapes.

Session title: Living the Dream While Barely Living: A Psychologist's Reckoning with Success, Burnout, and a Choice to Pivot
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Spotlight Stage
Division: APA
This Spotlight Stage Talk offers a candid exploration of what happens when the pursuit of professional success begins to undermine our ability to live well and stay aligned with purpose. The conversation centers the lived experiences of three psychologists who achieved what many in our field strive for, only to find themselves exhausted, disillusioned, or unwell.

Led by Dr. Taisha Caldwell-Harvey, psychologist, entrepreneur, and founder of The Black Girl Doctor, this panel brings together Black women psychologists who all made the choice to pivot. Each panelist will reflect on the high cost of overachievement, the burnout they faced, and what it took to redefine success in ways that made room for rest, purpose alignment, sustainability, and joy.
This conversation amplifies voices and stories that are often left out of traditional models of success in psychology. It explores how honoring diverse lived experiences, particularly those shaped by race, gender, and cultural context, can reveal new pathways for thriving in our profession. Through storytelling, insight, and reflection, this session will explore:

- The emotional and physical toll of success when systems reward overwork and self-sacrifice
- How burnout and moral injury show up in Black women psychologists
- The moment you realize you need to pivot, and the fear, grief, and freedom that follows
- The courage it takes to leave coveted roles and choose wellness over prestige
- How healing and redefining success can transform both professional and personal life

This session is an invitation to reimagine what's possible when we center identity and purpose as catalysts for impact and innovation.

Session title: Buddhist Psychotherapy: Connecting Early Buddhism to Mindfulness and Western Psychotherapy. Book Presentation by Liang Tien.
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #123 - APA Publishing/Bookstore
Division: APA
A rich resource enabling therapists to bring Buddhist philosophy to modern psychotherapy.
Mindfulnessbased interventions have become popular mental health treatments in recent years, but these interventions are typically applied by practitioners who lack knowledge of the interventions' Buddhist origins. The historical, religious, and philosophical foundations of mindfulness offer essential insights for clinicians and researchers alike.

This book, a collaboration between two practicing psychologists and an ordained Buddhist nun, examines the early Buddhist philosophical roots of mindfulness and provides a model for modern psychotherapy. In Buddhist psychotherapy, the therapist listens to a client discuss their concerns, considers how the client's suffering can be conceptualized from a Buddhist worldview, and uses mindfulness and other techniques taught by the Buddha to address the source of their suffering. This framework does not rely on any specific spiritual belief, but instead seeks to alleviate client suffering in a world where everything is ultimately impermanent and impersonal.
Amply illustrated with quotes from early Buddhist literature as well as modern clinical examples, this rich volume will help modern psychotherapists deepen their understanding of mindfulness and enrich their practice.

Session title: Youth Mental Health: How to Help a Generation Heal
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Ballroom Level, Four Seasons Ballroom 2-4, Main Stage
Division: APA

Today's young people are coming of age in an overwhelming world. The result? A generation that's hurting, but also reaching for support, for solutions, and for space to breathe. We'll explore new research on how to nurture youth and build resilience, as well as protective factors and practical strategies for helping young people thrive. This conversation offers an evidence-based roadmap for change that empowers not just young people, but the adults who care about them.

Room: Colorado Convention Center, Ballroom Level, Mile High Ballroom 1F
Division: 33 - Intellectual and Developmental Disabilities/Autism Spectrum

Disorder
This talk will explore key unanswered questions in early interventions for autistic children. What constitutes an evidence-based practice? How can we predict an individual child's response to a specific intervention? And what strategies are most effective when progress is minimal? While clinicians often recognize early on whether a child is benefiting from an intervention, determining how best to adjust or enhance it for slow responders remains a challenge. This presentation will highlight emerging methodologies that help clinicians systematize their decision-making, bridging research and practice to ensure every child receives the support needed for a positive developmental trajectory.

Division: Paid
Most therapists receive little to no business training in graduate school, leaving many highly skilled and compassionate mental health professionals struggling to attract patients and grow a sustainable practice. In this presentation, paid for by Jane App, Retired Psychologist and Business Coach Nicole McCance will share her proven 5-Step Scaling Method, the framework that enabled her to grow her clinic to 55 therapists in just 3 years and successfully sell her practice. Her 5-Step Scaling Method provides a clear, actionable roadmap for therapists looking to build a thriving, profitable practice while maintaining clinical excellence.
Attendees will gain insights into:
Systemizing Operations – Streamlining processes to improve efficiency and scalability
Building a Dream Team – Hiring and leading a high-performing clinical and administrative staff Attracting Patients with Digital Marketing – Leveraging online strategies to consistently generate leads Converting Patients with Consults – Enhancing consultation strategies to increase new client bookings
Retaining Patients with Follow-Ups – Implementing systems to improve patient retention and long-term success
Join Nicole McCance as she bridges the gap between clinical expertise and business strategy, empowering therapists with the tools to scale their practice, increase their impact, and achieve financial success.

*This presentation includes discussion of professional experience from a Canadian perspective. As titling and scope of practice differ between Canada and the U.S., U.S. attendees are reminded to adhere to the licensure regulations and professional standards of their individual states.

Session title: Transform Your Guilt and Shame: Evidence-Based Strategies to Heal From Trauma and Adversity. Book Presentation by Carolyn B. Allard.

Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #123 - APA Publishing/Bookstore
Division: APA
This book provides scientifically proven strategies for reducing guilt and shame associated with trauma and adversity.
Automatic reactions help us survive dangerous situations. Whether we are fighting to fend off an attacker, fleeing an explosion, or freezing to maintain attachment with an abusive parent upon whom we are dependent, our hardwired reactions keep us safe during intensely stressful times. But these automatic responses can be followed by guilt and shame, which can linger long after the traumatic events, making us anxious, avoidant, overreactive, irritable, depressed, angry, or passive. And these symptoms, in turn, can lead to more guilt and shame, which lead to more problematic coping behaviors, in a continuing cycle.
This book helps readers learn to transform their unhealthy guilt and shame by identifying and changing their ways of thinking and acting that may have been adaptive in a past situation but are now keeping them stuck in this unhealthy cycle. In particular, it focuses on five categories of thought that contribute to problematic guilt and shame and shows readers how to recognize and challenge these thoughts. Each chapter contains straightforward written exercises that guide readers through the transformation process, as well as relatable examples for illustration. Grounded in research-supported cognitive behavior therapy principles, this book will help readers break free from survivalbased reactivity and regain control over their lives.

Session title: Device Use Threatens Caregiver-Child Bond: Study Reveals Risks
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #629 - The Exchange
Division: Paid
Device use has surged, raising concerns about its impact on caregiver-child attachment bonds. A two-year national study explored this issue through three phases: developing measures, testing their reliability, and investigating their relationship with attachment.

In this interactive session, experts will:
• Discuss their study and validated measures
• Explore device "attachment" behaviors
• Highlight positive and negative effects of technology use
• Examine how caregiver device engagement may lead to insecure attachment bonds
• Provide strategies to identify, treat, and heal device-centric attachment ruptures
• Share study results showing a link between caregiver device use and attachment style
• Detail the creation and validation of new measures
• Offer evidence-based recommendations to address and heal device-driven attachment ruptures
• Provide skills to prevent future device-centric attachment issues

Session title: Reimbursement and Implications for Digital Mental Health Treatments in Clinical Practice
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #629 - The Exchange
Division: Paid
With the increasing availability of digital mental health treatments (DMHTs) there is newfound potential for clinicians to incorporate these technologies into their clinical practice. Nevertheless, until recently there has not been a mechanism validating the clinical efficacy of these treatments or a means of reimbursement, which has likely contributed to limited deployment and uptake of DMHTs by clinicians within their routine clinical practice. This session will discuss the new opportunities afforded by DMHTs as well as discuss how psychologists can leverage these in practice and be reimbursed, using the new Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) for DMHTs as an example. This will be an interactive session where all questions are welcome.

Key Takeaways:
• Understand what DMHTs are and how they differ from wellness products
• Obtain an understanding of how these treatments can complement and augment clinical psychology practice.
• Understand how DMHTs can be paid for and reimbursed, using the CMS DMHT codes as an example

Session title: Constructive Psychotherapies. Book Presentation by Jonathan D. Raskin.
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #123 - APA Publishing/Bookstore
Division: APA
This book examines the history, theory, practice, and empirical evidence for constructive psychotherapy.
Human beings exist within a context that is constructed by our language, worldview, and the stories we tell. Alone and in concert with one another, we construct meaningful understandings of the world. Because the invented nature of our reality is so often forgotten or overlooked, we can easily find ourselves trapped in prisons of our own making. Constructive theories are therefore useful to psychotherapists, who work with clients at the intersection between constructed meaning and experiential reality. Constructive therapies enable therapists to disrupt and reinterpret the meanings clients assign to their experience, and then initiate reconstruction processes that can open clients up to new possibilities. Chapters in this volume describe the history and theory of constructivism and constructive psychotherapy, examine the key therapeutic aims and techniques of constructive therapy, provide a nuts-and-bolts description of the therapy process, and summarize the empirical evidence for the effectiveness of this therapy.

Session title: Charting Your Path: Preparing for Clinical Internships in Psychology
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #629 - The Exchange
Division: Paid
This exchange session will focus on preparing for the final chapter of your graduate training – the clinical internship. Internships are available in a variety of practice settings and locations, but where do you begin? We invite you to explore your path as you get ready to apply for an APA-approved internship. While there are numerous internship opportunities out there, now is the perfect time to focus on preparing for the internship application and interview process by beginning to develop your professional brand.
This session will encourage you to consider your core values, building on your strengths, reflecting on areas for growth, and increasing your visibility as a professional during the internship application and interview process. Moderators will encourage you to develop a vision for work-life balance as you transition into professional life. As you navigate the internship process, we will encourage you to reflect on the kind of professional you want to become. You will have an opportunity to receive mentorship about the application process and how to best align your goals in an APA-approved internship program and beyond.

Key takeaways include:

- To explore and identify ways to strengthen your professional identity in health service settings.
- To connect your professional identity with your application to an APA-approved internship
- To receive mentorship during the internship application and interview process.

Session title: Optimizing Referral Flow in Private Practice
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #629 - The Exchange
Division: Paid
We receive such in-depth clinical training before we step out independently. For most of us though, there is very little (if any) training on how to build out a private practice. One of the most critical, and often one of the most challenging aspects of private practice can be building and sustaining a steady flow of patient referrals.

Unmet community needs for mental healthcare remain high, but figuring out how to market yourself and match with the right patient fit remains a very real challenge for many. There are patients who need your specialized care. The challenge for referrals is about how you connect in the most sustainable ways. If you have found that your referral flow has been too labor intensive to maintain, if you are just starting out in building your referral processes, or you want to consider ways to make your practice even stronger - come ready to join in!

In this discussion we will consider some of the most impactful and effective ways to build out referral networks, processes, and tools that work for your practice. We will cover a framework for successful referral approaches, and ways to overcome common barriers that are experienced. We hope you will come ready to discuss, share your own experiences, and learn from colleagues in this interactive session.

Key Takeaways:
1. Be able to clearly articulate your ideal client and ideal referral sources.
2. Identify at least 3 new approaches you may take to building your referral networks, processes, or tools.
3. Develop a plan to make your referral processes more sustainable

Session title: Co-creating with AI: Unlocking the Human Creative Potential of Teams in Technology & Future of Work
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 301
Division: 10 - Society for the Psychology of Aesthetics, Creativity and the Arts
Humans are naturally explorers. Throughout the history of American enterprise, three maxims of discovery have fueled cultural and economic growth: Minds conceive. Hearts believe. Teams achieve.
Today, however, 80% of executives report they cannot innovate quickly enough. Why? Organizations continue to overlook and misunderstand the creative skill sets essential for success. The World Economic Forum's Future of Jobs Report 2025 reinforces this, identifying these same cognitive, emotional, and social skills as essential problem-solving skills for thriving in an AI-driven world.
The result?

- Fear remains the top barrier to innovation (85% of practitioners report it), yet fewer than 11% of companies address it.
- Innovation grief, skills gaps, and attention deficits erode return on investment.
- AI-driven industries lack emotional and cultural intelligence, leading to poor product-market fit, team burnout, and stalled innovation cycles.

This skill-building session introduces Creative Brain Capital, a performance framework that combines neuroscience, industrial psychology and the arts to measure, align, and enhance team creativity.
Unlike traditional assessments focused on individual traits, Creative Brain Capital serves as the foundation for developing creativity into a key performance indicator (KPI) for organizational innovation.
By offering a structured yet flexible method, the framework unites the best of culture, commerce and brain science to strengthen creative resilience in AI-driven economies.
Key Takeaways:

- Learn how the cognitive, emotional, and social skills that drive creativity work independently and together in teams and organizations.
- Learn how to use the applied framework to diagnose and optimize innovation capabilities at the group level, enabling organizations to navigate AI complexity, reduce fear-driven inertia, and accelerate high-impact creative performance.
- Learn how to integrate the "discovery amplifiers" of Wonder, Trust, Freedom, and Joy to enhance creative persistence, adaptability, and decision-making during uncertainty.

Designed for psychologists, business executives, organizational leaders, economic developers, and innovation professionals, this session will provide attendees with immediately applicable strategies to enhance team creativity, improve ROI on innovation, and foster collaboration between arts, psychology, and the private sector

Session title: Division 50 Presidential Panel: Navigating a Fraught Political Landscape as Addiction Psychologists
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 607
Division: 50 - Society of Addiction Psychology
We are convening a panel of Division 50 members —including senior leadership, early career psychologists, and students—to discuss the impact of the current political climate on our practice of addiction psychology. Panelists will address current challenges and share strategies for responding with advocacy, action, and mutual support. Audience questions will guide a candid conversation on standing firm in our values, defending scientific integrity, and sustaining our commitment to the people at the heart of addiction psychology—our patients, communities, and the next generation.

Session title: Earl Alluisi Award for Early Career Achievement - Award Talk : Mitigating Misinformation Online: An Interdisciplinary Approach
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 605
Division: 21 - Applied Experimental and Engineering Psychology
The ubiquitousness of social media platforms and humans' extended use of them for news consumption paved the way for the proliferation of misinformation in the 2016 and 2020 United States presidential elections and the COVID-19 pandemic. Recently, deepfake images and videos are on the rise in social media platforms, engaging disinformation campaigns. The potential that Large Language Models (LLMs) such as ChatGPT can also be exploited to generate misinformation, poses extra concerns to the trustworthiness of online content. In this talk, Dr. Xiong will describe a few recent interdisciplinary efforts for misinformation mitigation and discuss challenges and potential solutions for mitigating AI-generated content (e.g., hallucinations and deepfakes). Note: The Earl Alluisi Award for Early Career Achievement recognizes outstanding achievements made by psychologists within 10 years of receiving their PhD.

Session title: Generative AI and Mental Health: Opportunities, Risks, and Research Priorities
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Spotlight Stage
Division: Paid
Psychologists have tried to keep pace with the ever-increasing rate of mental health problems, but there are simply not enough clinicians to treat everyone in need. Generative AI could be used in a number of ways to improve access to evidence-based interventions including through education and training, supervision tools, and self-guided interventions. Some parties are also exploring uses that remove humans from the loop such as autonomous AI chatbots. In exploring responsible uses of this breakthrough technology in the context of mental health it is critical to be guided by ethics, safety, and responsible development practices. This panel discussion, paid for by Google and moderated by a psychologist from the Mental Health Center of Excellence at Google, will explore the opportunities and risks associated with generative AI use in mental health. Panelists include scholars at Google, as well as academic researchers with expertise in this area. The aim is to educate psychologists about generative AI and to address some of the more pressing concerns and questions in this space.

In today's societal climate, clear communication of psychological expertise has never been more crucial. Psychologists excel at observation, analysis, and intervention—but explaining your work to the world? That's where storytelling becomes your secret weapon. Recognizing the critical importance of this skill, APA CEO Arthur C. Evans, Jr., PhD, has spotlighted this session as essential for today's psychology professionals. This dynamic, hands-on session will teach you how narrative techniques can transform your expertise into messages that stick with funders, policymakers, media, and communities beyond academia. You'll experience a captivating live story, decode what makes it powerful, then craft your own through guided exercises and peer collaboration. Whether you're a clinician, a researcher, or a student, you'll leave with proven storytelling tools—and perhaps the beginning of a story that changes everything.

Session title: The Role of Resilience in Global Displacement: International and Environmental Perspectives
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 109
Division: 34 - Society for Environmental, Population and Conservation Psychology
In this critical conversation, causes and outcomes of global dislocation and displacement within perspectives of environmental and international psychologies will be explored, particularly related to climate, environmental, and sociopolitical changes and events. We emphasize the importance of understanding how both historical and contemporary issues impact migrants and refugees across the globe. We explore how physical and social dislocation happens, as well as how it can lead to detachment and loss of individual and/or collective identity, home, and culture as well as environmental and sociopolitical factors influencing this process. We also identify and integrate sources of protective factors and psychological resilience in response to the adversities faced. Because there is a strong, current wave of migration among large numbers of people globally in response to specific events, circumstances, and geopolitical realities in their communities, this topic is of the utmost concern for psychologists invested in both global and environmental psychologies. Furthermore, we also acknowledge that forms of displacement can occur in communities where people remain in place due to both major and minor shifts in society, economic, political, and cultural exchanges and/or challenges. Any loss of identity or integration due to displacement must matter to psychologists. Theory and research on psychological disruption, social dislocation, as well as resilient responses must be explored to provide competent and ethical services.

Session title: The understudied psychology of privacy: From controlling our data to controlling our stories
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 208

Division: 46 - Society for Media Psychology and Technology
Shockingly, mainstream psychology has neglected the study of privacy despite decades-old calls for more research (Berscheid, 1977). Spark new research ideas with applied psychologists in marketing and AI who are bringing attention to the human side of privacy. This session will examine recent publications on control perceptions and identity maintenance.

Session title: Transforming Organizational Trauma into Pathways for Equity and Justice
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 603
Division: 14 - Society for Industrial and Organizational Psychology
Organizational trauma—the pervasive psychological harm inflicted by systemic, structural, and interpersonal stressors—disproportionately impacts professionals from marginalized and oppressed identities. This symposium illuminates how such trauma thrives within systems of power and privilege, perpetuating inequities and hindering the well-being and professional potential of marginalized individuals.

Session title: Understanding determinants of self-controlled choice and promoting healthy behavior change
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 706
Division: 25 - Behavior Analysis

In daily life, people make choices among various rewarding and aversive consequences that differ in quality, magnitude, and immediacy, and sometimes come bundled with additional rewarding or aversive consequences. Problematic decisions can arise when a single choice produces consequences of conflicting valence – those that are rewarding in the short term, but that lead to aversive consequences later. Understanding factors that influence decisions involving such conflicting-valence consequences can guide the development of effective treatments for behavior that is habitually controlled by only the short-term outcomes. Substance use disorders provide prime examples of this issue, as drug self-administration often produces consequences that are highly rewarding in the short-term and aversive in the long-term. The conflicting effects of these consequences, which are arranged at different points in time, can make substance use disorders difficult to treat. Further complicating their treatment is the fact that substance use disorders are concentrated among at-risk populations, including people who are unemployed and who live in poverty. The Therapeutic Workplace is an employment-based contingency management intervention designed to address these interrelated issues simultaneously. Recent research evaluating a version of the Therapeutic Workplace called Abstinence-Contingent Wage Supplements has increased abstinence from opiates and cocaine, and alcohol – while simultaneously promoting employment and reducing poverty. This talk explores recent findings from basic research on intertemporal choice involving conflicting-valence consequences and related applied research aimed to improve the health and prosperity of people living with substance use disorders.

Session title: From Chatbots to Virtual Therapists: Should AI Ever Be the Therapist?
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #629 - The Exchange
Division: Paid
AI-driven therapy chatbots and digital mental health interventions are on the rise, raising ethical and practical questions: Can AI effectively supplement therapy, or should it remain strictly an administrative tool? Could AI-driven interventions replace certain aspects of traditional therapy, or is the human element irreplaceable? This session explores the current capabilities and future implications of AI-driven mental health interventions in a robust and interactive session.

Key takeaways include:

- Discuss the strengths and limitations of AI-driven therapy tools.
- Debate ethical concerns of autonomous AI mental health interventions.
- Explore how AI and human therapists can coexist in a hybrid model of care.

Session title: Common Misunderstandings about Procedural Fidelity
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 706
Division: 25 - Behavior Analysis
Procedural fidelity refers to the extent to which procedures are implemented as designed or described. Despite its importance, procedural fidelity is often misunderstood and inconsistently measured in behavior-analytic practice and research. This presentation highlights several common misconceptions about procedural fidelity, including the confusing use of multiple terms, and addresses barriers to accurate measurement, such as challenges in observation and scoring. For example, although high fidelity is desirable, it may not be uniformly necessary. Low fidelity can make outcomes unpredictable, and relying on global measures of fidelity may obscure critical errors in specific components of implementation. The presentation explores practical strategies for integrating meaningful fidelity measures into behavior-analytic research and practice, including the use of component and rate-based measures, consideration of context and resources in choosing measurement systems, and training practitioners to collect accurate fidelity data. Through these approaches, practitioners and researchers can improve intervention quality and advance their practice and research.

Session title: Innovating Global Networks to Inspire Tomorrow's Experts (IGNITE) Conference: Social Justice Through Teaching and Research
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 401
Division: 52 - Society for Global Psychology
In this Presidential Address, Dr. Martha S. Zlokovich, President of Division 52 (Society for Global Psychology) and retired Executive Director of Psi Chi, will present the outcomes of Psi Chi's 2024 National Science Foundation (NSF) grant supporting the Innovating Global Networks to Inspire Tomorrow's Experts (IGNITE) Conference. This initiative, held in November 2024, was designed to foster global research collaborations while advancing social justice in psychological science. With over 1000 applicants for 150 in-person spots, IGNITE prioritized faculty and students from small universities, HBCUs, HSIs, Pell Grant-eligible backgrounds, and first-generation college students—groups historically underrepresented in research opportunities. The conference focused on equipping participants with research skills and international collaboration opportunities through Psi Chi's Network for International Collaborative Exchange (NICE), a global, crowdsourced, annual research initiative. Dr. Zlokovich will discuss how global research networks like NICE can break down barriers in psychological science, enabling students and faculty to engage in international research regardless of location or nationality. She will also highlight IGNITE's role in addressing two critical issues in the field: the need for improved research practices and the underrepresentation of undergraduate students in research due to time and resource constraints. This session will provide valuable insights for educators, researchers, and students interested in leveraging global networks to enhance research accessibility, equity, and social justice in psychology. Attendees will gain a deeper understanding of how international collaboration can empower the next generation of psychology professionals and drive innovation in the field.

Session title: Empowering Families: Addressing Self-Harm in Teens & Young

Adults
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #629 - The Exchange
Division: Paid
Family system and parents striving to support their adolescent and young adult engaging in self-harm or struggling with suicidality is one of the most painful experiences that parents and siblings will encounter. This can have detrimental effects on the entire family system, often resulting in trauma, PTSD and negatively impacting each member of the family, including the person struggling to maintain their safety. This roundtable discussion will explore ways in which providers can teach and reinforce strategies to family members supporting their child and sibling in crisis. We will also discuss approaches that providers can provide to successfully mitigate the suffering and, often, loneliness that family systems experience when a teen or young adults is engaging in self-harming behaviors.

Key takeaways include:

- Recognizing the common struggles that family systems experience when a child or sibling is self-harming or contemplating suicide and approaching with compassion while assessing the needs of a family
- Identify skills deficits that family systems often have when living in perpetual crisis to help reduce suffering and increase the resiliency of a family system
- Understand secondary trauma behaviors and PTSD as it relates to the family system and introduce strategies that can help mitigate trauma-related symptoms

Division: APA
The Handbook of Rehabilitation Psychology has been significantly updated to reflect major changes in the field of rehabilitation, including an emphasis on health outcomes and person-centered care.
Chapters address core topics, such as education, training, and competency-based practice, as well as specific health conditions, including chronic pain, spinal cord injury, traumatic brain injury, and amputation.
This new edition also addresses how innovative methods such as artificial intelligence and virtual reality are improving rehabilitation, and explores topics in public health and community rehabilitation.
Contributors integrate their experience with empirical research, highlight methodological advances, recommend best practices, discuss policy implications, and identify future possibilities. Both experienced and early-career practitioners will find this book to be an invaluable resource for delivering effective behavioral health care to people with chronic health conditions.

Session title: Mastering Media: How Psychologists Can Navigate Public Engagement with Confidence
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Ballroom Level, Four Seasons Ballroom 1
Division: APA
In an era where media plays a pivotal role in shaping public understanding of psychology, psychologists have many opportunities to engage and instruct. This dynamic session brings together leading professionals in media psychology, including Dr. Joanne Broder, Dr. Don Grant, Alexandria Ortiz, Dr. Christopher Heffner, and Dr. Lawrence M. Drake II, to explore the strategies and ethical considerations of working with traditional and digital media.

Attendees will learn how to establish a media presence, build relationships with reporters, and craft impactful messages for interviews. Presenters will share insights from their own media experiences—celebrating successes and learning from setbacks. The session will also address the growing influence of social media, the risks of misinformation, and AI's evolving role in media engagement. Whether you're an academic, clinician, or researcher, this discussion will empower you to effectively communicate your expertise to the public while maintaining ethical integrity and professional credibility.

Session title: Reducing impulsive choice
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 505
Division: 25 - Behavior Analysis

This presentation will summarize the some of the behavioral-economic, impulsive-choice, and delay-discounting research conducted by Dr. Madden and his many influential colleagues and outstanding graduate students over the last 30 years. From early laboratory research with humans, to clinical research with substance-use and gambling-disordered populations, the link between impulsive choice and negative health-impacting behavior was explored in human and nonhuman subjects. As the correlation between impulsive choice and maladaptive behavior was established in meta-analyses and laboratory studies showing that impulsive rats were more likely to self-administer cocaine, Dr. Madden's focus shifted to exploring methods for reducing impulsive choice in nonhumans. Several methods have proven effective in Dr. Madden's and other labs – reward-bundling, delay-exposure training, fixed-interval training – but the time and effort required to produce large and lasting reductions in impulsive choice has heretofore been impractical for translational purposes. Therefore, Dr. Madden has been exploring novel – Pavlovian, conditioned reinforcement – methods that show promise for producing comparable outcomes with a fraction of the time/effort devoted to training.

Session title: What does it really take to start an independent private practice as a Health Service Psychologist?
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Spotlight Stage
Division: APA
In this session, we'll highlight key business considerations and decision points that often go untaught in traditional training. Designed with psychologists in mind, this educational spotlight draws from lessons learned through APA's recent work with psychologists preparing to go solo—whether for the first time or after years in other professional roles.
You'll get a look at practical notes that demystify the start-up process, clarify common blind spots, and connect the dots between clinical work and business operations. Psychologists from across specialties—including clinical, school, neuropsych, and forensic to name a few —have engaged with these concepts to better understand how to transition thoughtfully and effectively into private practice.
Whether you're just beginning to consider the idea or supporting someone who is, this session offers valuable insights, context, and reflection prompts to guide the journey.
Come with your questions—and leave with a clearer sense of what stepping into independent practice really involves.

Session title: Clinical Hypnosis for Pain Control: A Comprehensive Approach to Management and Treatment, Second Edition. Book Presentation by David Patterson.
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #123 - APA Publishing/Bookstore
Division: APA
This comprehensive guide shows how integrating hypnosis with psychotherapy and mindful meditation can help clinicians treat patients who suffer from chronic and acute pain.
David R. Patterson and M. Elena Mendoza present hypnotic analgesia as a viable alternative to psychopharmacological interventions for pain resulting from physical injuries, nerve damage, surgery, neurological problems, and other sources. They review research elucidating the neurophysiological and biopsychosocial roots of pain and provide clinical strategies that can be applied in a variety of settings. Patterson and Mendoza adopt a nuanced treatment model that deemphasizes pain reduction, which can be counterproductive, and focuses instead on adaptive pain management through cognitive restructuring.

This second edition includes updated research findings and practice guidelines, including technological innovations like virtual reality hypnosis, and a new chapter on mindful meditation. The authors also add a step-by-step case example that walks readers through an integrative, eight-session process and brings the techniques described in this volume to life.

Session title: Helping Skills: Facilitating Exploration, Insight, and Action, Sixth Edition. Book Presentation by Judy Gerstenblith.
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #123 - APA Publishing/Bookstore
Division: APA
This sixth edition of this seminal textbook offers an updated model for aspiring helping professionals to enhance their clinical skills.

Significant updates to this edition include:

- new interactive features to improve student learning, including self-reflection exercises to help them cultivate their own values and perspectives as helpers and role-play activities for hands-on learning;
- updated case examples and reflection questions that reflect a broad range of diversity among clients and providers;
- a shift from a stage-based model to a more fluid, goal-based model of helping skills; and
- empirical updates that help students understand the importance of tailoring interventions to clients' individual needs.

Clara Hill's helping skills model consists of three main goals—exploration, insight, and action—in which helpers guide clients in exploring their thoughts and feelings, discovering the origins and consequences of maladaptive thoughts and behaviors, and creating positive longterm change.
This easy-to-read guide synthesizes Hill's extensive clinical and classroom experience with fresh, unique insights from coauthors Harold Chui and Judy Gerstenblith. They teach fundamental theory and provide students with clinical skills, challenge them to think critically about the helping process, and enable them to develop their own unique approach to helping clients.

Session title: Treatment of Posttraumatic Stress Disorder in Serious Mental Illness: The Cognitive Restructuring Program. Book Presentation by Kim T. Mueser and Jennifer D. Gottlieb.
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #123 - APA Publishing/Bookstore
Division: APA

This book is a practical guide to the evidence-based Cognitive Restructuring (CR) for PTSD program, which has been specifically designed to meet the unique needs of people with serious mental illness.
Posttraumatic stress disorder (PTSD) is very common among persons with serious mental illness (SMI). Unfortunately, it often leads to more severe psychiatric symptoms, greater impairment in psychosocial functioning, poorer physical health, and a higher use of acute care services among people with SMI. Yet despite major advances in the treatment of PTSD in the general population, PTSD has remained underdiagnosed and underaddressed among people with SMI, and treatments for this population have been relatively neglected.
This practical, hands-on guide gives clinicians the tools they need for screening, detecting, and treating PTSD in their clients with SMI, including schizophrenia, bipolar disorder, major depression, and borderline personality disorder. Chapters summarize research and theory regarding the interaction between PTSD and SMI, provide nuts and bolts strategies for implementing the authors' Cognitive Restructuring for PTSD program, and offer guidance for overcoming clinical challenges to trauma treatment such as psychotic symptoms, low distress tolerance, emotion dysregulation, hopelessness, and cognitive impairment. Chapters also feature in-session dialogues with case vignettes that follow three unique clients as they participate in the CR for PTSD program.

Handouts and worksheets for delivering the CR for PTSD program are available in the Appendix of the book as well as in printable versions online under the resources tab. These online resources also include the educational handouts and worksheets translated into Spanish, a supplemental chapter on The BREATHE Program: A Brief PTSD Intervention for Persons with SMI in Special Settings, and the BREATHE Treatment Program.

Division: Paid
Device use has surged, raising concerns about its impact on caregiver-child attachment bonds. A two-year national study explored this issue through three phases: developing measures, testing their reliability, and investigating their relationship with attachment.

In this interactive session, experts will:
• Discuss their study and validated measures
• Explore device "attachment" behaviors
• Highlight positive and negative effects of technology use
• Examine how caregiver device engagement may lead to insecure attachment bonds
• Provide strategies to identify, treat, and heal device-centric attachment ruptures
• Share study results showing a link between caregiver device use and attachment style
• Detail the creation and validation of new measures
• Offer evidence-based recommendations to address and heal device-driven attachment ruptures
• Provide skills to prevent future device-centric attachment issues

Session title: From the specific to the general: Examining transgender and gender diverse issues can provide broader understanding of health, misinformation, and policy

Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 503
Division: 08 - Society for Personality and Social Psychology
In recent years, the health, wellbeing, and even existence of transgender Americans has come under fire. Ranging from bathroom bans to outright bans on best practice gender affirming healthcare, legislation and policy guided by misinformation and political rhetoric has negatively impacted the well-being of transgender and gender diverse populations while contributing to further political polarization. However, this circumstance also opens the door to achieve a broader understanding of health, misinformation, and policy support; in seeking to explore why individuals believe misinformation about transgender health and well-being, we may be able to achieve a greater understanding of the pathways by which people are susceptible to misinformation more generally. In this talk, I will share recent findings from recent work that is founded in the context current socio-political environment. In particular, I will highlight the impacts of anti-transgender legislation on transgender individuals, as well as discuss work that explores what makes individuals susceptible to the misinformation that underlies many of these policies and laws. Building from this work, I will demonstrate how a greater understanding of issues facing minoritized populations can help us build towards a broader understanding of health, misinformation, and policy. I will conclude by discussing the implications of this research for scientific theories, translational research, and practice.

We "exist in the context," but we often teach without it. Instructors forgo discussing historical information due to the shortage of time, or assumed lack of student interest, or a belief that it doesn't matter. While I can do nothing about the class time, I would like to show you that history matters for understanding our content, and that students will be interested if you are inspiring this interest. However, making sure that the history we include is accurate also matters, as too many textbooks and professors repeat erroneous tidbits like a broken telephone game. The history of how and why this happens can also be educational and can serve to enhance content coverage. Was Freud a heavy substance user when he crafted his theories? Did Chomsky really destroy Skinner? Is Watson the evilest psychologist ever? Did Zimbardo pick rich kids for his prison study? Was Loftus involved in the "satanic panic"? Let's check what we know, and discover how giving more accurate historical context to our class content can benefit our students.

Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #629 - The Exchange
Division: Paid
The shift to on-demand therapy, digital interventions, and AI-assisted care has made mental health services more accessible—but at what cost to clinicians' work-life balance and professional boundaries? This discussion will explore the unintended consequences of a 24/7 digital mental health landscape, how therapists can set healthy boundaries, and what role AI can play in reducing clinician burden rather than increasing it.

Key takeaways include:

- Identify how digital mental health impacts clinician burnout and boundaries.
- Discuss strategies for balancing availability with personal time in a digital-first world.
- Explore how AI and automation can help clinicians reclaim time and prevent overwork.

Session title: The future of the History of Psychology at APA: Presidential Address for Division 26 (the Society for the History of Psychology)
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 704
Division: 26 - Society for the History of Psychology
Kurt Danziger (1994) famously wrote that the future of the History of Psychology would best focus on two unheard but nevertheless important sources: women and internationals. Three decades of excellent research followed. Despite this, however, we are worse off now then we were then. On the occasion of the 60th anniversary of the Division, I regret that it's now the History of Psychology itself that often goes unheard. With an ever dwindling number of substantive programming hours at Convention, it is no longer possible to run an independent research conference under the APA's aegis. There just aren't enough speaker slots to bring together a critical mass. So this year we partnered with Cheiron and the European Society for the History of Human Sciences to run the first ever Three Societies Meeting in Paris: the largest meeting of historians of psychology in many years. But despite our success in moving some of our substantive programming away from Convention, I still think there is a future for History at APA. It's just not in developing new research. Rather, it's about bringing highlights from the specialty to the audience of psychologists who have already decided to attend. To support this goal, I will present an analysis of the APA Fellows database using multiple affiliations as a proxy for interests and thereby showing where History's closest and most strategic allies are (within the association), so Historians of Psychology can reach out more easily and help advance the discipline by other means.

Session title: Through the Looking-Glass: Reflections on What Matters During Inverted Times
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 304
Division: Psi Chi
Similar to Alice's foray into her looking-glass, we find ourselves in the midst of a confusing land where time seems to move backwards, logic doesn't apply, and mercurial leaders mislead with wordplay. During inverted times, commitments to prioritize diverse voices, intercultural understanding, and global connections are critical to amplify, celebrate, and importantly, continue. Through a combination of storytelling (both Alice's and the speaker's stories) and sharing research, we will consider how to double down on what matters. Our work and the work of Psi Chi is even more consequential as we navigate the challenges to come.

Session title: To Release or Not to Release: A Review of Common Scenarios and Risk Considerations When Releasing Patient Records

Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Spotlight Stage
Division: Paid
Patients are entitled to access their health records in accordance with the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act (HIPAA). It is essential to facilitate easy access to this information for patients or their authorized representatives while ensuring compliance with privacy and security standards outlined in the HIPAA Privacy Rule. This session, paid for by American Professional Agency, will examine the rights of patients under HIPAA regarding access to their health records and will cover various types of requests, including the release of records for minors, requests for letters or forms, and third-party requests from attorneys, law enforcement, or family members. Additionally, we will address best practices for managing subpoenas and court orders, as well as the importance of obtaining consent for the release of information. The presentation aims to educate participants on these matters to mitigate potential harmful consequences for both the patient and the psychologist. Familiarity with state and federal laws and regulations governing patient confidentiality and data privacy and security is crucial to minimize the risk of board complaints, grievances to the Office of Civil Rights, and litigation when disclosing an individuals's records.

This session is paid for by American Professional Agency, an APA 2025 sponsor and APA corporate supporter, and does not constitute endorsement by APA.

Session title: Truth-telling as Resistance: Decolonial Understandings of Palestine and the Encampments
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 207
Division: 39 - Society for Psychoanalysis and Psychoanalytic Psychology
The Gaza strip and West Bank have been subject to unlawful occupation, racial segregation, and apartheid by Israel for decades (International Court of Justice, 2024). Over the past two years, Israel has carried out acts prohibited under the Genocide Convention (Amnesty International, 2024). College students have played a pivotal role in activism for Palestinian rights, launching solidarity encampments and demanding divestment from war profiteers. However, there has been a global and national effort to distort realities about Palestine and the encampments. As psychologists, our ethical imperatives include considering human and civil rights, honesty and transparency, and multicultural competence. Decolonial frameworks address the impact of Eurocentric, privileged narratives, and center oppressed identities and narratives. In this dialogue, we will discuss Israel's violations of international law, firsthand accounts of the encampments, and the various cognitive distortions of reality, psychological warfare, and psychological operations tactics used to disavow Palestinians' and student activists' lived experiences. By centering the perspectives of oppressed identities, we aim to display the impact of distorted truths, to shed light on the repression of Palestinian activism, and to use our voices as psychologists as a form of resistance.

Session title: A Conversation about Autism Spectrum and Related Constructs: Implications for Psychologists
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Spotlight Stage
Division: Paid
The construct of autism has undergone changes since the original description of "infantile autism" by Leo Kanner in 1943. Over time, the construct of autism broadened to include other presentations, such as Asperger's syndrome and pervasive developmental disorder. In 2013 responding to poor diagnostic validity DSM-5 introduced autism spectrum disorder (ASD), which collapsed 5 diagnoses into a spectrum. Alongside this conceptual change additional constructs, such as profound autism, syndromic autism, autistic social identity, and pervasive demand avoidance have emerged. Despite predictions ASD diagnostic criteria would result in a decrease in autism prevalence, autism rates continue to raise while rates of intellectual disability (ID) diagnoses, have decreased. There are benefits and drawbacks associated with a spectrum and associated constructs. For example, autism social identity maybe associated with improved mental health. In this session, paid for by Catalight, three presenters with expertise in autism, a psychologist who is a parent of a child with ID, an autistic researcher and a researcher who is also a diagnostician, will engage in a conversation that explores autism constructs, implications of the spectrum and potential avenues for more cohesion in our conceptualization of autism.

This session is paid for by Catalight, an APA 2025 sponsor, and does not constitute an endorsement by APA.

The Links & Shoulders Graduate Student Mentoring Hour is a special event held at the APA Convention and sponsored by Division 45. This gathering provides graduate students with the opportunity to connect with mentors of color and those from historically marginalized backgrounds in an informal, supportive setting. Students, many of whom are underrepresented in psychology graduate programs, engage in meaningful conversations with mentors on topics such as applying for internships and postdoctoral fellowships, navigating the academic job market, research and publishing, developing leadership and service skills, addressing bias and microaggressions, and much more.

Division: 45 - Society for the Psychological Study of Culture, Ethnicity and Race
This session is sponsored by APA Divisions of Social Justice (DSJ), with the goal of demonstrating how psychologists and allied professionals may promote political justice in a myriad of ways. The DSJ are a group of twenty-three (23) Divisions of APA that have come together to address shared social justice concerns. The work of DSJ, since its founding in the 1990's, has focused principally on raising awareness of social justice concerns and addressing their psychosocial implications through processes of conversation and dialogue with colleagues in APA divisions who are interested in DSJ's advocacy efforts and who may lend their knowledge to DSJ projects they choose to support. This session will review the clinical and social factors that contribute to police involved psychiatric emergencies in youth ages 5-12, exclusively. A review of race and SES differences, the impact of trauma, and set the charge for clinicians to have an active role in changing crisis response for children.

Session title: ICE and Psychology: Immigration Policies and Impact on Clinical Practice, Research, and Training
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Ballroom Level, Mile High Ballroom 2-3, Feature Stage
Division: Ethnic Psychological Association
The second Trump administration has seen an unprecedented rate of executive actions, including more than any other President in U.S. history during his first 100 days in office. These actions have occurred in parallel with changes to funding priorities and government personnel and spending restructuring occurring with the stated aim of increasing government efficiency and aligning with the administration’s priorities of immigration enforcement and dismantling DEI efforts in higher education and employment. Every element of psychological practice has been touched by these rapid and, at times confusing, changes to policy and practice. This presentation—featuring two members of the APA Presidential Task Force on Immigrant Health and one Director of Clinical Training—will highlight changes occurring in terms of (1) border security and clinical services for immigrants, (2) training and student well-being in the anti-DEI climate, and (3) uncertainty in research funding and academic freedom. Brief presentations will highlight the current state of affairs in each of these domains as well as actionable steps for mitigating harm to practitioners, clients, and trainees in psychology.

Session title: Managing discrimination experiences: The role of impression management emotion-regulation goals and self-control in emotion regulation
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 503
Division: 08 - Society for Personality and Social Psychology
Contending with discrimination can yield a cascade of negative psychological and physiological outcomes which adversely affect health. How individuals manage their emotions in response to discrimination can influence the extent of these negative health outcomes. Research finds, however, that Black and Latine individuals are more likely to use expressive suppression (vs. cognitive reappraisal) in response to discrimination, which is associated with adverse mental health outcomes. In the present research, we explored whether self-control (the ability to manage impulses and regulate thoughts, emotions, and behavior to achieve long-term goals) and impression management emotion-regulation goals (regulating emotions to shape others' perceptions of one's personality and skills) could help explain the differential use of suppression and reappraisal in response to discrimination. Across two cross-sectional studies, we found that Black and Latine participants' everyday discrimination experiences were related to lower self-control and increased impression management emotion-regulation goals. Reduced self-control was, in turn, linked to less use of reappraisal, while impression management goals were associated with both greater reappraisal and suppression use in response to discrimination. Reappraisal was also related to participants' self-reported depressive symptoms. These findings contribute to our understanding of the factors that are associated with emotion regulation in response to discrimination.

Session title: The Role of Mentors at Community Colleges
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 208
Division: Psi Beta
Mentorship plays a pivotal role in the academic and professional development of both students and faculty, in particular newer faculty, at community colleges. This presentation explores the roles of mentors at community colleges, ways we mentor, and some of the benefits this relationship provides to all involved.

Mentorship fosters academic and professional growth, a positive learning environment, and integration into the academic community. This presentation will focus on both the classroom experience and beyond the classroom and include discussion of how Psi Beta helps provide mentoring opportunities for those interested in psychology and resources that can help. Both students and faculty (2-year and 4- year) can find points of interest and take aways from this presentation.

Digital mental health treatments (DMHTs) confer new opportunities for clinical psychologists to expand their treatment offerings and practice. This session will discuss and explore how 1) to identify evidence-based DMHTs, 2) explore clinical use cases for how psychologists can incorporate these into their practice and 3) use concrete examples to show the versatility and opportunity of these programs across clinical settings. This will be an interactive session where all questions are welcome.

Key Takeaways:
● Identification of evidence-based DMHTs
● Understanding the ways that DMHTs can be incorporated into clinical practice and the clinical use cases for them
● See how psychologists are already leveraging DMHTs in their clinical practice

Session title: Rethinking Employee Resilience: Why Our Current Approach to Worker Burnout is Failing, and How to Fix It. Book Presentation by Dan Pelton.
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #123 - APA Publishing/Bookstore
Division: APA
Rethinking Employee Resilience is a practical, evidence-based guide to creating workplaces that invest in their workforce - the backbone of every organization. In an era of institutional collapse, workforce resilience isn't a luxury; it's non-negotiable.

Burnout has quietly become the new normal. As trust in institutions crumbles and career stability feels like a relic of the past, organizations face a choice: cling to outdated models or redefine their cultures to prioritize human resilience.
This book challenges the self-help industry's one-size-fits-all narrative, reframing burnout as a systemic issue embedded within organizational culture. It unfolds in three parts: debunking common burnout myths, redefining employee resilience, and offering tailored 'on-ramps' for organizations of all sizes.
Drawing from his work as a clinical psychologist in Afghanistan, where he provided mental health care to thousands of soldiers, to a decade leading mental health initiatives in management consulting, Dr. Dan Pelton has seen how burnout takes root—and knows how to dismantle it.
Rethinking Employee Resilience isn't just another leadership manual filled with hollow platitudes. This book rejects the status quo — an unconventional guide for leaders and employees to transform organizational culture, grounded in empirical research, industry insights, and real-world experience.

Session title: Psychological Assessment of Adult Posttraumatic States: Phenomenology, Diagnosis, and Measurement, Third Edition. Book Presentation by Erin M. Eadie.

Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #123 - APA Publishing/Bookstore
Division: APA
This book presents a detailed yet practical summary of the major issues and instruments involved in the assessment of posttraumatic disturbances.
Drs. Eadie and Briere analyze the types of traumas most likely to produce long-term difficulties, and explain the biological, historical, social, and cultural factors that mediate between trauma and long-term outcome. This fully-updated new edition combines extensive research on traumatic events, including rape, stalking, sex trafficking, torture, terrorist attacks, motor vehicle accidents, and natural disasters, along with new material on complex traumas, parental disattunement and emotional neglect, drug-facilitated sexual assault, sex trafficking, pregnancy loss, COVID-19-related stressors, and exposure to social maltreatment. Especially relevant to the clinician, researcher, and forensic specialist, this book reviews the available research on standardized measures currently available for evaluating the impact of trauma, with a close evaluation of the psychometric characteristics of each instrument. A comprehensive review of new trauma-relevant measures is provided, with an emphasis on direct clinical relevance to the assessment of posttraumatic states.

This exchange session will focus on preparing for the final chapter of your graduate training – the clinical internship. Internships are available in a variety of practice settings and locations, but where do you begin? We invite you to explore your path as you get ready to apply for an APA-approved internship. While there are numerous internship opportunities out there, now is the perfect time to focus on preparing for the internship application and interview process by beginning to develop your professional brand.

This session will encourage you to consider your core values, building on your strengths, reflecting on areas for growth, and increasing your visibility as a professional during the internship application and interview process. Moderators will encourage you to develop a vision for work-life balance as you transition into professional life. As you navigate the internship process, we will encourage you to reflect on the kind of professional you want to become. You will have an opportunity to receive mentorship about the application process and how to best align your goals in an APA-approved internship program and beyond.

Key takeaways include:

- To explore and identify ways to strengthen your professional identity in health service settings.
- To connect your professional identity with your application to an APA-approved internship
- To receive mentorship during the internship application and interview process.

Session title: Improve Patient Safety and Reduce Liability Risk: ERM Self-Assessment for Psychology Practices
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #629 - The Exchange
Division: Paid
This facilitated discussion will outline key areas to consider assessing in a psychology practice setting with the objective of reducing the risk of a future claim or licensing board complaint and build a stronger defense in the event of a claim. Topic areas include office policies and procedures, documentation, informed consent/refusal, website management and use of social media and technology, office safety and security, release of information, prescribing, treating minors, and managing patient emergencies.

Key takeaways include:

- Identify operational and patient care gaps using the framework of Enterprise Risk Management.
- Ability to conduct a psychology practice self-risk assessment to mitigate the risk of a licensing board complaint or medical malpractice claim while improving patient safety.
- Prioritize identified gaps that may create the highest risk to patient safety and provider liability and institute policies and procedures to reduce risk.

Session title: Carol Gilligan and the Search for Voice. Book Presentation by Bill Cole.
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #123 - APA Publishing/Bookstore
Division: APA

A biography of the life and work of groundbreaking developmental psychologist Carol Gilligan, intended for high school age readers, part of the APA's Extraordinary Women in Psychology Series.
Carol Gilligan has devoted her life to discovering, uncovering, and recovering voices belonging to girls and women, as well as boys and men. Through her work, she has played an enormous role in reconceptualizing traditionally held views on moral and identity development in young people, most prominently in her landmark 1982 book detailing her ethic of care model, In a Different Voice (coined by Harvard University Press as "The little book that started a revolution"). Drawing on source material that includes interviews with Gilligan as well as her own writings in books and articles, this book offers young readers not only the opportunity to learn about a pioneering psychologist and her momentous work, but also for them to consider the potential power of their own voices as they go forward in life.

Session title: From Research to Reality: Psychology's Role in Implementing Effective Digital Mental Health Solutions
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Ballroom Level, Four Seasons Ballroom 2-4, Main Stage
Division: APA
As digital mental health tools rapidly evolve from promising prototypes to essential clinical resources, the critical question isn't whether they work—it's how to make them work in practice. This dynamic discussion between APA's CEO, Arthur C. Evans, Jr., PhD, and leading experts who have successfully bridged the gap between AI's potential and its impact will move beyond buzzwords and dive into real-world application. Whether you're a practitioner, administrator, or researcher, you'll gain actionable insights to turn digital innovation into tangible results.

Session title: Healing the Healers: AI's Role in Addressing Burnout and Moral Injury
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Spotlight Stage
Division: Paid
Mental health professionals face mounting administrative demands that detract from direct client care, contributing to burnout and moral injury. Systemic barriers—such as excessive documentation requirements, insurance-driven constraints, and inefficient workflows—often force clinicians to work against their professional values, leading to emotional exhaustion and ethical distress.
This session, paid for by Upheal, explores how AI-assisted documentation can help streamline workflows, reduce administrative burdens, and realign clinical practice with ethical care. It will include emerging research from Upheal on AI's potential to automate repetitive tasks, enhance documentation accuracy, and minimize insurance-related hurdles, allowing clinicians to prioritize therapeutic presence over paperwork.

Attendees will gain practical insights on integrating AI responsibly, addressing concerns around bias, autonomy, and data security, and ensuring that AI supports rather than replaces clinical decision-making.

This session is paid for by Upheal, an APA 2025 sponsor and APA corporate supporter, and does not constitute endorsement by APA.

Session title: Innovations in Digital Mental Health: The Intersection of Media, Technology, and Psychological Care
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Terrace Level, Bluebird Ballroom 2C
Division: 46 - Society for Media Psychology and Technology
This timely and dynamic symposium explores how digital innovation is reshaping mental health care. As media and technology continue to evolve, psychologists are at the forefront of integrating these tools into assessment, treatment, and service delivery. This multi-presenter session brings together leading experts who will showcase emerging practices and evidence-based approaches across diverse clinical settings. Topics include: best practices for virtual intensive outpatient programs for mood, anxiety, and eating disorders; the development and application of FDA-authorized digital therapeutics for depression; the use of artificial intelligence to improve accuracy in clinical outcome assessments; and human-centered applications of augmented intelligence in brain injury care. Together, these presentations offer a forward-looking view of how psychologists can harness digital tools to enhance care, reduce disparities, and prepare for the future of psychological practice.

In this session, chaired by Kristin Valentino (University of Notre Dame) and co-chaired by Jodi Quas (University of California, Irvine), presenters will explore the evolving landscape of online victimization in the context of child maltreatment, with a focus on risk factors, intervention opportunities, and the role of technology. Heather Taussig (University of Denver and Kempe Center, University of Colorado School of Medicine) will discuss modifiable correlates of online abuse among youth in child welfare, offering insights into actionable strategies that could reduce risk. Lisa Jones (University of New Hampshire) will examine the complex links between image-based and online abuse, childhood victimization, and adverse experiences, shedding light on how prior maltreatment intersects with new forms of digital harm. Warren Binford (University of Colorado Anschutz Medical School) will then address the various forms of tech-facilitated child abuse emerging in the 21st century, underscoring the importance of prevention and policy reform. Jodi Quas (University of California, Irvine) will highlight the benefits of technology in improving professional training to enhance victim identification and support. Finally, Kristin Valentino will lead a discussion that synthesizes key themes, emphasizes evidence-based practices, and outlines critical steps to improve safety for children in the digital realm.

Session title: Understanding the Benefits and Drawbacks of Harnessing Identity-targeted Interventions in Health Contexts
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 503
Division: 08 - Society for Personality and Social Psychology
Members of minoritized groups experience disproportionately worse physical and mental health outcomes in the U.S. One proposed approach to mitigate these disparities is employing identity-targeted interventions that are designed to address knowledge gaps and increase feelings of inclusion among minoritized persons. However, while some of these interventions effectively achieve their goals, others can inadvertently harm inclusion and undermine engagement with health communication. In this talk, I will discuss the effectiveness of two types of identity-targeted interventions. Specifically, I will demonstrate how the utilization of identity-safety cues—symbols, statements, and behaviors which signal that one's identity is valued in a setting—can foster inclusion among minoritized groups and identify conditions under which these cues are less likely to be effective. Additionally, I will discuss the consequences associated with information targeting, an intervention where health information is disseminated to audiences believed to be at high-risk for a health condition. In particular, I will discuss whether and why various forms of information targeting backfire, the mechanisms underlying these effects, and strategies that can be employed to more effectively deliver targeted health communication. Together, this talk will delineate more (vs less) effective ways for promoting inclusion in healthcare environments, ultimately informing health equity efforts.

Unlock the science behind child custody evaluations.
Psychologists today play a crucial role in providing court assessments for child custody cases. But, gone are the days of relying solely on clinical judgment—courts now demand a more scientific approach.
This guide offers an evidence-informed framework for conducting child custody evaluations. It reviews critical components such as forensic interviewing, parent-child observation, document review, and accounting for one's own personal biases. The authors explore the strengths and limitations of psychological testing and assessment, and demonstrate how custody evaluations require a dimensional approach that emphasizes behaviors over diagnoses. Extensive research is synthesized on all these critical topics, as well as more specific issues such as alienation, parent-child contact problems, domestic violence, and parental relocation requests.
Whether you're a seasoned professional or new to the field, this book is an indispensable resource for conducting scientifically sound, legally defensible evaluations.

Session title: Empowering Families: Addressing Self-Harm in Teens & Young Adults
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #629 - The Exchange
Division: Paid
Family system and parents striving to support their adolescent and young adult engaging in self-harm or struggling with suicidality is one of the most painful experiences that parents and siblings will encounter. This can have detrimental effects on the entire family system, often resulting in trauma, PTSD and negatively impacting each member of the family, including the person struggling to maintain their safety. This roundtable discussion will explore ways in which providers can teach and reinforce strategies to family members supporting their child and sibling in crisis. We will also discuss approaches that providers can provide to successfully mitigate the suffering and, often, loneliness that family systems experience when a teen or young adults is engaging in self-harming behaviors.

Key takeaways include:

- Recognizing the common struggles that family systems experience when a child or sibling is self-harming or contemplating suicide and approaching with compassion while assessing the needs of a family
- Identify skills deficits that family systems often have when living in perpetual crisis to help reduce suffering and increase the resiliency of a family system
- Understand secondary trauma behaviors and PTSD as it relates to the family system and introduce strategies that can help mitigate trauma-related symptoms

Session title: Reimbursement and Implications for Digital Mental Health Treatments in Clinical Practice
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #629 - The Exchange
Division: Paid
With the increasing availability of digital mental health treatments (DMHTs) there is newfound potential for clinicians to incorporate these technologies into their clinical practice. Nevertheless, until recently there has not been a mechanism validating the clinical efficacy of these treatments or a means of reimbursement, which has likely contributed to limited deployment and uptake of DMHTs by clinicians within their routine clinical practice. This session will discuss the new opportunities afforded by DMHTs as well as discuss how psychologists can leverage these in practice and be reimbursed, using the new Centers for Medicare & Medicaid Services (CMS) for DMHTs as an example. This will be an interactive session where all questions are welcome.

Key Takeaways:
• Understand what DMHTs are and how they differ from wellness products
• Obtain an understanding of how these treatments can complement and augment clinical psychology practice.
• Understand how DMHTs can be paid for and reimbursed, using the CMS DMHT codes as an example

Session title: Division 56 Presidential Panel: Evolving the Practice of Trauma Psychology: Innovative Treatments and Emerging Trends
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Ballroom Level, Mile High Ballroom 1CD

Division: 56 - Trauma Psychology

This panel presentation brings together leading experts to discuss groundbreaking and evolving treatments for post-traumatic stress disorder (PTSD), offering a dynamic exploration of novel therapeutic approaches. The panel will feature three distinct, evidence-informed interventions: MDMA-assisted Prolonged Exposure Therapy (MDMA+PE), Stellate Ganglion Block (SGB), and Ketamine-Assisted Psychotherapy (KAP). Each panelist will present an overview of their respective treatment modality, highlighting current research, clinical applications, and outcomes. The first panelist will explore the synergistic potential of MDMA in enhancing Prolonged Exposure Therapy, discussing its impact on treatment adherence and symptom reduction. The second panelist will examine the role of a Stellate Ganglion Block, a promising technique offering rapid relief of PTSD symptoms through targeted anesthetic injections when combined with an evidenced-based psychotherapy. The third panelist will present on Ketamine-Assisted Psychotherapy, detailing the unique dissociative properties of ketamine and its role in facilitating trauma processing and psychological integration. A skilled moderator will guide the session, fostering a lively and interactive discussion on the benefits, limitations, and future directions of these treatments. The panel will also address issues of diversity, equity, and inclusion (DEI), considering how these innovative treatments can be made accessible to diverse populations and tailored to meet the unique needs of marginalized communities. Attendees will gain valuable insights into the evolving landscape of PTSD treatment, including practical considerations for implementation and the ethical implications of using these innovative approaches in clinical practice. This panel promises to be an engaging and thought-provoking exchange, providing clinicians, researchers, and mental health professionals with a deeper understanding of cutting-edge interventions poised to transform PTSD care.

Session title: Illuminating the Dark Shadows of Cyber-Aggression
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Spotlight Stage

Division: Paid
Cyber-aggression, (including the cyberbullying behaviors most prevalently perpetrated via social media platforms), has emerged as an increasingly nefarious threat. Although posited by experts to be a factor associated with the chronic rise in depression, anxiety, and self-harm among adolescents, adults are neither safe from, nor immune to, its potentially devastating impacts, either. Alarming statistics surrounding cyber-aggression are globally consistent and concerning, with marginalized and vulnerable populations considered to be most at risk. Educators, legislators, health agencies, clinicians, practitioners, parents, young adults, and even children believe cyber-aggression to pose a serious risk to adolescent mental health and safety. Due to the nascence of the behavior, an association has not yet been consensually proven, but as a topic of current robust inquiry and investigation it seems reasonable to imagine the relationship between them to be a pragmatic possibility. In this session, a globally recognized cyber-aggression expert will expose and explore this significantly dangerous digital phenomenon.

In this session, paid for by Newport Healthcare, attendees will be provided with evidence-based strategies and skills of how to identify, assess, approach, and reconcile cyber-aggressive events, including online bullying. Recommendations regarding how to incorporate and apply them in the design, implementation, and evaluation of effective cyber-aggression policies and practices, and promote protective factors to avoid future cyber-aggressive events-including in the workplace-will also be offered.
A Q&A will be held at the end of the presentation.

This session is paid for by Newport Healthcare, an APA 2025 exhibitor and APA corporate supporter, and does not constitute an endorsement by APA.

Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 507
Division: 37 - Society for Child and Family Policy and Practice
In this session, chaired by Kristin Valentino (University of Notre Dame) and co-chaired by Jodi Quas (University of California, Irvine), presenters will explore the evolving landscape of online victimization in the context of child maltreatment, with a focus on risk factors, intervention opportunities, and the role of technology. Heather Taussig (University of Denver and Kempe Center, University of Colorado School of Medicine) will discuss modifiable correlates of online abuse among youth in child welfare, offering insights into actionable strategies that could reduce risk. Lisa Jones (University of New Hampshire) will examine the complex links between image-based and online abuse, childhood victimization, and adverse experiences, shedding light on how prior maltreatment intersects with new forms of digital harm. Warren Binford (University of Colorado Anschutz Medical School) will then address the various forms of tech-facilitated child abuse emerging in the 21st century, underscoring the importance of prevention and policy reform. Jodi Quas (University of California, Irvine) will highlight the benefits of technology in improving professional training to enhance victim identification and support. Finally, Kristin Valentino will lead a discussion that synthesizes key themes, emphasizes evidence-based practices, and outlines critical steps to improve safety for children in the digital realm.

Session title: Translational Science in Action: Bridging Basic and Applied Behavior Analysis Through Digital Contingency Management

Room: Colorado Convention Center, Ballroom Level, Mile High Ballroom 4F
Division: 25 - Behavior Analysis
Contingency Management (CM) is among the most empirically supported interventions for substance use disorders, yet its implementation remains limited due to logistical and systemic barriers. Recent advancements in digital CM offer a path toward overcoming these challenges, providing a scalable and high-fidelity intervention with the potential for public health impact. This presentation will examine the critical role of translational research in bridging basic behavior analysis and applied interventions, highlighting the necessity of integrating laboratory-derived principles with real-world implementation. By leveraging technology, CM can achieve widespread adoption, ensuring that evidence-based practices transition effectively from research settings to large-scale implementation. This talk will emphasize the importance of continued synthesis between the experimental analysis of behavior and applied research to maximize CM's impact.

Session Type: Solutions Center
Session title: Data-Driven Success: Monitor and Grow a Thriving Private Practice
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #629 - The Exchange
Division: Paid
Creating a successful and sustainable private practice begins with identifying what it means to thrive in that practice. In this interactive session, we will discuss what thriving means to you, and how you can monitor your practice. We will cover a range of sources of data inputs that can be used to both develop your goals to thrive, and monitor your independent practice across administrative processes, marketing, clinical care, and business operations. What we value and what we want to monitor in our practice will likely shift over time, and we will discuss examples of these shifts and how to keep ahead of them.

We will discuss applications of these approaches within independent solo and small group settings, and have opportunities to share successes and setbacks to tracking and building a thriving private practice. Applying a data-informed practice to not only our clinical approaches, but also our business practices, can improve outcomes for ourselves and ultimately our practices. Case examples, and learnings from both successes and barriers to application of these approaches in independent practice will be discussed. Come ready to discuss, share, and learn alongside your colleagues in this session.

Key Takeaways:
1. Identify what a thriving private practice looks like for you.
2. Identify the range of data inputs that can be used across administrative processes, marketing, clinical care, and business operations in a clinical practice to track your progress.
3. Define a strategy for integrating data and data-informed decision making into your clinical practice and business.

Session title: Neurobehavioral Mechanisms of Self-Injury in Stereotypic Movement Disorder: Theoretical Perspectives and Temporal Dynamics
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 404
Division: 25 - Behavior Analysis
More than three million individuals in the United States with intellectual and developmental disabilities engage in self-injurious behavior (SIB), with consequences ranging from minor injuries to severe, life-threatening harm. Beyond its physical risks, SIB places a significant burden on caregivers, often necessitates restrictive interventions, limits opportunities for community and educational inclusion, and imposes a substantial strain on healthcare systems. While SIB is frequently maintained by social contingencies, in a substantial subset of cases, it occurs independent of social contingencies and may be highly resistant to reinforcement-based interventions. In this presentation, I will examine competing theoretical perspectives regarding the persistence of SIB in stereotypic movement disorder. Specifically, I will explore two mechanistic hypotheses: (1) the endogenous opioid hypothesis, which suggests that SIB is maintained by qualitatively superior endogenous consequences relative to alternative sources of reinforcement, and (2) the behavioral inflexibility hypothesis, which posits that SIB persists due to reduced sensitivity to environmental change, limiting behavioral variability and adaptation. I will discuss how these hypotheses can be empirically tested using applied research methodologies and examine their potential translational applications, particularly in relation to the study of the temporal dynamics of SIB.

Session title: Deliberate Practice in Interpersonal Psychotherapy. Book Presentation by Olga Belik.
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #123 - APA Publishing/Bookstore
Division: APA
Deliberate practice exercises provide trainees and students an opportunity to build competence in essential interpersonal therapy skills while developing their own personal therapeutic style.
These exercises present role-playing scenarios in which two trainees act as a client and a clinician, switching back and forth under the guidance of a supervisor. The clinician improvises appropriate and authentic responses to client statements organized into three difficulty levels—beginner, intermediate, and advanced—that reflect common client questions and concerns.
Each of the first 10 exercises focuses on a single skill, including developing an interpersonal inventory of patients' relationships, building social skills, and helping patients connect with their own thoughts and emotions and empathize with others. Two comprehensive exercises follow in which trainees integrate these essential skills into a single session.

Step-by-step instructions guide participants through the exercises, identify criteria for mastering each skill, and explain how to monitor and adjust difficulty. Guidelines to help trainers and trainees get the most out of training are also provided.

Digital mental health treatments (DMHTs) confer new opportunities for clinical psychologists to expand their treatment offerings and practice. This session will discuss and explore how 1) to identify evidence-based DMHTs, 2) explore clinical use cases for how psychologists can incorporate these into their practice and 3) use concrete examples to show the versatility and opportunity of these programs across clinical settings. This will be an interactive session where all questions are welcome.

Key Takeaways:
• Identification of evidence-based DMHTs
• Understanding the ways that DMHTs can be incorporated into clinical practice and

the clinical use cases for them
• See how psychologists are already leveraging DMHTs in their clinical practice

Session title: Optimizing Referral Flow in Private Practice
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #629 - The Exchange
Division: Paid
We receive such in-depth clinical training before we step out independently. For most of us though, there is very little (if any) training on how to build out a private practice. One of the most critical, and often one of the most challenging aspects of private practice can be building and sustaining a steady flow of patient referrals.

Unmet community needs for mental healthcare remain high, but figuring out how to market yourself and match with the right patient fit remains a very real challenge for many. There are patients who need your specialized care. The challenge for referrals is about how you connect in the most sustainable ways. If you have found that your referral flow has been too labor intensive to maintain, if you are just starting out in building your referral processes, or you want to consider ways to make your practice even stronger - come ready to join in!

In this discussion we will consider some of the most impactful and effective ways to build out referral networks, processes, and tools that work for your practice. We will cover a framework for successful referral approaches, and ways to overcome common barriers that are experienced. We hope you will come ready to discuss, share your own experiences, and learn from colleagues in this interactive session.

Key Takeaways:
1. Be able to clearly articulate your ideal client and ideal referral sources.
2. Identify at least 3 new approaches you may take to building your referral networks, processes, or tools.
3. Develop a plan to make your referral processes more sustainable

APA CE: 1.5 • APA CE New York: 1.5 Session Type: Headline Event
Session title: Doing What You Can: Advocacy Doesn't Have to be Intimidating
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Ballroom Level, Four Seasons Ballroom 2-4, Main Stage
Division: APA
In this energizing session, psychologists and policy shapers will share how research can directly impact legislation—from research funding to equity for vulnerable populations. We'll move beyond vague calls to "get involved" and break down advocacy into clear, practical actions—many of which don't require a trip to Capitol Hill or calls to your members of Congress . Through real-world examples and simple strategies, you'll learn how to use your expertise to create impact at any level, in ways that match your comfort and capacity.

Session title: Improve Patient Safety and Reduce Liability Risk: ERM Self-Assessment for Psychology Practices
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #629 - The Exchange
Division: Paid
This facilitated discussion will outline key areas to consider assessing in a psychology practice setting with the objective of reducing the risk of a future claim or licensing board complaint and build a stronger defense in the event of a claim. Topic areas include office policies and procedures, documentation, informed consent/refusal, website management and use of social media and technology, office safety and security, release of information, prescribing, treating minors, and managing patient emergencies.

Key takeaways include:

- Identify operational and patient care gaps using the framework of Enterprise Risk Management.
- Ability to conduct a psychology practice self-risk assessment to mitigate the risk of a licensing board complaint or medical malpractice claim while improving patient safety.
- Prioritize identified gaps that may create the highest risk to patient safety and provider liability and institute policies and procedures to reduce risk.

Session title: Addressing nicotine service disparities across the continuum of care for diverse Latino communities
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 505
Division: 50 - Society of Addiction Psychology
Substance misuse disorders continue to present challenges for individuals and communities of diverse backgrounds. Latino communities, both locally and internationally have faced disparities in accessing services that represent their cultural needs and realities. This symposium will focus on nicotine misuse (cigarette, e-cigarette, and vape misuse) as it addresses disparities in services across the continuum of care. Presenters will discuss how disparities in prevention, treatment, and recovery services continue to affect the Latino community. Speakers will present empirical research with diverse groups of Latinos including Colombian youth from diverse socio-economic backgrounds, Latino sexual minority men, and Latino adults' survivors of childhood trauma, focusing on particular cultural variables with each one of these groups. This presentation will showcase evidence-based prevention and treatment that is community engaging, scientifically sound, and culturally appropriate to diverse groups of Latinos. Finally, presenters will discuss the use of technology and innovative methods in addressing these services disparities, and the opportunity to use community-centered digital tools in the prevention and treatment of nicotine misuse disorders for diverse members of the Latino community.

Session title: Cultivating Inclusive Pathways: Creativity, Wellness, and Entrepreneurship in Sport and Performance
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 503
Division: 47 - Society for Sport, Exercise and Performance Psychology
This session offers a dynamic exploration of how sport and performance psychology principles can be expanded and applied across diverse domains through creativity, wellness practices, and entrepreneurship. By integrating these approaches, practitioners can address the unique needs of athletes, performers, and communities, fostering resilience, mindfulness, and inclusion in innovative and impactful ways.
Attendees will engage in hands-on activities and discussions to deepen their understanding and application of sport psychology in nontraditional settings.
The session will begin with an introduction to the intersection of creativity and psychology, including a demonstration of how creative modalities like floral design and mindfulness exercises can enhance grounding and connection in high-pressure environments. Participants will then explore wellness practices that support mental performance and emotional regulation, emphasizing their relevance to diverse clients.
The session will also delve into entrepreneurship as a pathway to inclusivity, showcasing strategies for designing client-centered spaces and programs that address the cultural and contextual needs of underserved populations. Participants will learn actionable tools for building and scaling their own initiatives while maintaining a focus on accessibility and equity.
Interactive components will include small-group brainstorming sessions, creative exercises, and practical demonstrations to ensure participants leave with tangible skills and ideas. These engagement strategies will enable attendees to reflect on how they can apply sport psychology principles in unique pathways, fostering meaningful impact within their professional practice.
By the end of the session, attendees will have a toolkit of innovative strategies for integrating creativity, wellness, and entrepreneurship into their work, empowering them to create inclusive, culturally competent, and client-centered spaces in sport and performance psychology.

Remote and hybrid work arrangements are now a defining feature of the modern workplace. Recent estimates indicate that about 27% of paid days in the U.S. in May 2025 were work-from-home days. Globally, the average number of remote workdays is estimated at 1.3 days per week. While these arrangements remain popular among employees, they have generated debate among organizations and politicians. This session will focus on the current state of knowledge with regard to remote/hybrid work with regard to performance and wellbeing, separating misconception from empirical data. Reflections on equity of access and organizational practice will be included.

Session title: Unmasking Inequities: Reforming Clinical Psychology Training for a Culturally Competent Future
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 702
Division: American Psychological Association of Graduate Students
Clinical psychology graduate training is intended to equip future clinicians with the necessary skills to provide effective mental health care. However, pervasive issues within externship and internship programs, particularly around cultural competency, supervision quality, and the exploitation of student labor, disproportionately affect students from diverse cultural backgrounds. This symposia will explore the systemic shortcomings of these training programs and their impact on minority students. By drawing on recent research and firsthand experiences, this session will critically examine the cultural blind spots in clinical training and propose structural reforms to create a more equitable and effective educational environment.

Session title: Data-Driven Success: Monitor and Grow a Thriving Private Practice
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #629 - The Exchange
Division: Paid
Creating a successful and sustainable private practice begins with identifying what it means to thrive in that practice. In this interactive session, we will discuss what thriving means to you, and how you can monitor your practice. We will cover a range of sources of data inputs that can be used to both develop your goals to thrive, and monitor your independent practice across administrative processes, marketing, clinical care, and business operations. What we value and what we want to monitor in our practice will likely shift over time, and we will discuss examples of these shifts and how to keep ahead of them.

We will discuss applications of these approaches within independent solo and small group settings, and have opportunities to share successes and setbacks to tracking and building a thriving private practice. Applying a data-informed practice to not only our clinical approaches, but also our business practices, can improve outcomes for ourselves and ultimately our practices. Case examples, and learnings from both successes and barriers to application of these approaches in independent practice will be discussed. Come ready to discuss, share, and learn alongside your colleagues in this session.

Key Takeaways:
1. Identify what a thriving private practice looks like for you.
2. Identify the range of data inputs that can be used across administrative processes, marketing, clinical care, and business operations in a clinical practice to track your progress.
3. Define a strategy for integrating data and data-informed decision making into your clinical practice and business.

Session title: The Hidden Cost of 24/7 Digital Mental Health: Clinician Boundaries in an Always-On World
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Booth #629 - The Exchange
Division: Paid
The shift to on-demand therapy, digital interventions, and AI-assisted care has made mental health services more accessible—but at what cost to clinicians' work-life balance and professional boundaries? This discussion will explore the unintended consequences of a 24/7 digital mental health landscape, how therapists can set healthy boundaries, and what role AI can play in reducing clinician burden rather than increasing it.

Key takeaways include:
- Identify how digital mental health impacts clinician burnout and boundaries.
- Discuss strategies for balancing availability with personal time in a digital-first world.
- Explore how AI and automation can help clinicians reclaim time and prevent overwork.

Session title: Effects and Mechanisms of Acute and Chronic Exercise on Memory Function
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 206
Division: 47 - Society for Sport, Exercise and Performance Psychology
The objective of this symposium is to present up-to-date information on the role of acute and chronic exercise in enhancing and preserving memory function across the lifespan. We will discuss different ways in which memory is assessed, including addressing various memory systems, such as declarative and non-declarative memory. We will engage the audience by, for example, incorporating a memory task for the audience to participate in. We will review the literature addressing the effects of different intensities of acute exercise on memory, indicating which intensity may be optimal and how it may impact with various parameters, such as age and fitness level. Such effects will be discussed for various memory systems. The critical timing of acute exercise on memory will be discussed, including whether acute exercise should be performed before encoding, during encoding, during consolidation, and/or prior to or during memory retrieval. For each of these phases, we will discuss the unique mechanisms through which acute exercise may influence memory. In the context of chronic exercise, we will discuss how much habitual exercise is needed to enhance memory. Additionally, we will discuss the role of chronic exercise in preserving memory among those with cognitive impairments, and the various psychological, cognitive, and neurophysiological mechanisms through which exercise may influence memory.

Session Type: Symposium
Session title: Effects of Trauma on Infants, Young Children, and Families and Ways to Promote Resilience
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 503
Division: 07 - Developmental Psychology
Young children continue far too often to be exposed to ongoing traumas of abuse and neglect, exposure to domestic violence and substance use. In the past three years, the additional traumas from COVID-19 including death of parents or caregivers, financial hardship, and increased stress in families have contributed to more child distress. During the COVID-19 pandemic, it has been estimated that in the United States, more than 240,000 children lost a parent or caregiver to COVID-19. In comparison with natural disasters, the COVID-19 pandemic has resulted in many more losses without needed support. These losses can be devastating for development and long-term well-being of young children leading to emotional and behavioral dysregulation, regression in sleeping, eating, toileting, difficulties with attachment and separations, and mental health issues that may increase over time without supportive interventions. Racial and ethnic disparities in caregiver loss have also been identified. Relationships with caring adults are very important to support resilience. Support for caregivers and children accompanied by positive early childhood and community settings can play key roles in supporting resilience by being present, emotionally available, and listening to the children.

Learning Objectives:
1. Participants will learn about the effects of trauma on young children including the significant impact of losses during the COVID-19 pandemic including the inequities in losses

2. Listeners will gain more information about how trauma can impact on young children's social, emotional, and cognitive development.
3. Participants will understand more about strategies that can be implemented to support resilience in young children and families.

Session title: What does it really take to start an independent private practice as a Health Service Psychologist?
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Exhibit Level, Exhibit Hall A, Solutions Center, Spotlight Stage
Division: APA
In this session, we'll highlight key business considerations and decision points that often go untaught in traditional training. Designed with psychologists in mind, this educational spotlight draws from lessons learned through APA's recent work with psychologists preparing to go solo—whether for the first time or after years in other professional roles.
You'll get a look at practical notes that demystify the start-up process, clarify common blind spots, and connect the dots between clinical work and business operations. Psychologists from across specialties—including clinical, school, neuropsych, and forensic to name a few —have engaged with these concepts to better understand how to transition thoughtfully and effectively into private practice.

Whether you're just beginning to consider the idea or supporting someone who is, this session offers valuable insights, context, and reflection prompts to guide the journey.
Come with your questions—and leave with a clearer sense of what stepping into independent practice really involves.

Psychologists dedicate their careers to understanding and improving the human experience—but what about their own journeys? Inspired by iconic storytelling events like the Moth, and in partnership with Story District, this dynamic session features four psychologists from across the profession sharing the human stories behind their work—the defining moments, challenges, and insights that shaped why they do what they do. Each storyteller's perspective reveals how personal experiences power possibilities and purpose in our field. From unexpected challenges to lightbulb moments, these stories will leave you inspired, entertained, and ready to reflect on your own journey in psychology.
Story District helps people and organizations harness the power of personal narrative to strengthen communication, culture, and connection. Based in Washington, DC and acclaimed for its live performances and award-winning workshops, Story District trains individuals, teams, and leaders to craft and deliver stories that make people listen and act.
From boardrooms to theaters, Story District transforms real-life experience into real impact. Through custom programs, coaching, and showcases, they help businesses, nonprofits, and government agencies elevate voices, build trust, and lead with authenticity.

Session title: Embracing Neurodiversity: Key Considerations for Supporting Athletes with ADHD
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 406
Division: 47 - Society for Sport, Exercise and Performance Psychology
Athletes with attention-deficit/hyperactivity disorder (ADHD) face unique challenges in managing their symptoms under pressure situations and in high-performance environments. Research shows a higher prevalence of ADHD in athletes compared to the general population, necessitating targeted approaches by providers to support athlete psychological, emotional, and physical well-being. This session will examine the complexities and opportunities of working with neurodiverse athletes, emphasizing a strengths-based approach that views neurodiversity as an asset.
The presentation will begin with an overview of the major developments within current evidence-based research on ADHD in athletes, such as gender differences in symptom presentation, impacts of ADHD diagnosis on athlete self-esteem, motivation, and academic success, as well as increased risk of concussions and injury. Attendees will then engage in meaningful dialogue on effective strategies to support athletes with ADHD, focusing on practical, evidence-informed interventions. The presenter will utilize interactive methods such as real-time collaboration tools, small breakout discussions, and large group sharing to ensure diverse voices are heard. Discussion will also include advocacy strategies to raise awareness among coaches, teammates, and stakeholders about the unique strengths and challenges involved when working with this population.

Based on the session content, participants will be able to: 1) Gain insights to deepen understanding of the needs of athletes with ADHD, allowing for better practice and greater advocacy; 2) Acquire actionable strategies and tailored interventions to apply in professional practice and create supportive, resilience-promoting environments for clients. This session aligns with continuing education standards by building upon the foundation of a completed doctoral program in psychology, enabling participants to stay current with scientific evidence, enhancing competencies in psychological interventions, and addressing key issues such as treatment barriers and gender bias in a specialized population. It fulfills Standard D: 1.1 by emphasizing empirically supported intervention methods and exploring ethical considerations, including stigma reduction and advocacy.

Session title: When Education is Monkey Business and How to Make Monkey Business Educational
Room: Colorado Convention Center, Street Level, 404
Division: 25 - Behavior Analysis
Education is teaching and teaching is changing behavior. Public awareness campaigns seek to educate a community about a particular issue, increasingly through social media. However, the efforts are hierarchical and with the emphasis on the delivery rather than on the effects. Wildlife rescue and rehabilitation organizations often employ public awareness campaigns to educate community members about animal treatment and welfare but do not always produce desired changes in the community members' behavior with respect to the animals.Through participating in wildlife rescue and rehabilitation activities in Africa I learned of the struggles the operators of a monkey rescue organization encountered in educating the public and changing the behavior of community members. In this presentation, I explore these and other experiences to provide some insights into approaches that go beyond traditional educational and public awareness campaigns to effect large scale behavioral changes in the face of competing interests.
