Families are in excellent hands at Northside Pediatrics thanks to Drs. Natalie Metzgi, Tiji Philip, Kate McGlamry and Adele Goodloe, a team of experienced physicians who, simply put, love caring for kids. “Children’s innocence, resilience, silliness and so much more make my career so special and enjoyable,” says Dr. Metzgi. Adds Dr. McGlamry, “The ability of children to bounce back and bring cheer, no matter how sick, is something I’ll always appreciate.”

The top doctors—all four of whom grew up in Atlanta—deliver personalized, high-quality care for the small superheroes who come through their doors. “I love working at Northside Pediatrics because our entire team of doctors and nurse practitioners focuses on providing the best care for Atlanta’s kids every day,” shares Dr. Goodloe. This dedication—combined with “patience and humbly realizing we will all forever be students, so you must continue to be willing to learn and grow every day,” says Dr. Philip—has not only led to successful patient outcomes, but also helped to establish Northside Pediatrics as a place that families trust for over 40 years.

The pediatricians understand they have a “unique opportunity to help influence the upcoming generations,” Dr. Philip shares, which is why their team can often be found interacting with and giving back to the Atlanta community. “For example, I started the Cherokee County chapter of Walk with a Doc, which met regularly for family walks at a local park,” reveals Dr. Goodloe. “While bringing expert knowledge and healthy habits to my community is important, navigating the ups and downs of parenthood alongside my patient families is priceless.”

Their best piece of advice for parents? “I encourage my patients’ parents to trust their mom- and dad-intuition,” says Dr. McGlamry. “Parents know when something is not right with their child,” agrees Dr. Metzgi, “and if you listen and follow that instinct in combination with evidence-based medicine, you cannot go wrong with patient care.”
