Brazilian Peanut Report

DECEMBER/2025

Overview

Brazilian crop planting is completed, with current estimations for area decrease averaging 35%, but with some opinions going from 20 to 40%.

Weather is going well so far, rain is forecasted for the next 6 days in Mogiana, followed by 4 days of sun. Similar forecast for Alta Paulista.

Bellow some pictures of the same fields published in the last report, about one month ago:

Exports

Exports of kernels are down in November, while exports of oil are up resulting in record numbers. Marketwise, Europe remains very quiet, Russia and other alternative markets are increasing appetite for current and new crop.

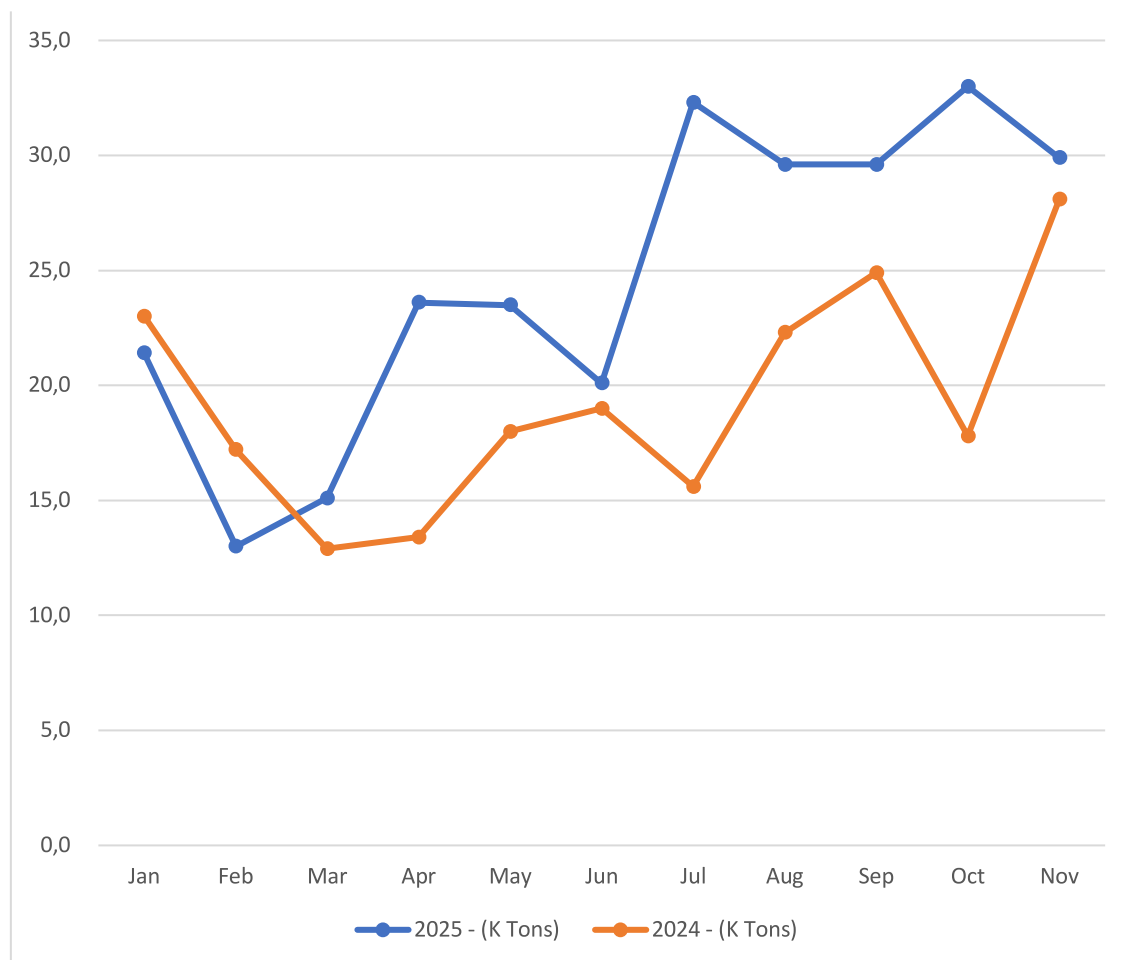

Argentina also decreased planted area by about 20-30%, which will help balance the offer-demand, nevertheless, with the considerable carryovers, it is tough to say if the market will go up any time soon.
