VANDERBURGH COUNTY EVANSVILLE, INDIANA ESTABLISHED IN 1841

JUNE 1, 2025 THE ASCENSION OF THE LORD

Dear friends,

Many of the scripture passages that we have reading these past few weeks come from the Gospel of John and tend to be identified as Jesus' last words to this disciples. At one point Jesus knows the disciples are anxious about being left on their own and he tells them "if you loved me you would rejoice that I am going to the Father." (John 14:28). There is a natural tendency to be anxious when the time comes for us to have to be on our own. Jesus understands but reassures the disciples (and us) that the Father will send the Advocate to be our helper and guide. He trusts us and believes in us.

Still, it can be a bit daunting. It's like the kid who now has the ride the bike with the training wheels taken off. It is even more so when we face things that feel overwhelming.

Recently I can across this quote, "if you are going through hell, make sure you don't come back empty handed." No one really wants to go through difficult times and yet one of the hard earned bits of wisdom is that life is hard and full of challenges. We all will face times like these—an unexpected death, a cancer diagnosis, the loss of a job, the end of a relationship, a friend suffering from a drug or alcohol addiction. They come, unwanted and often unexpected and they flat out knock the wind out of our sails.

When you are in the midst of any of these challenges, sometimes the only thing you can do is to do the next thing and trust that it will lead you on. It takes great courage to just simply show up to the experiences of our life.

The old adage tells us "if it doesn't kill you it will make you stronger, but first you will feel pretty awful." When we have walked this journey, we know something about not coming back empty handed from going through hell.

Jesus continued to reassure his disciples—"Do not let your hearts be trouble," "Do not be anxious or afraid." I guess he knew all to well the human condition. Truth be told, Jesus had more confidence in the disciples than they had in themselves. And it is true for us as well.

St. Paul tells us in the reading from Ephesians "may your eyes be enlighten so that you may know the great hope to be which you are called." And later, he tells, "we give thanks to God whose power now at work in your lives can do far more than you can ask or imagine."

Sometimes, as we face the challenges of life, we need to take a deep breath, quiet all the anxious voices in our heads, and then move forward with confidence. We need to take Jesus at his word when he said, "I will be with you always."

Leaning into the journey of life,

Fr. Gene Schroeder

THE LOVE OF THE HEART OF JESUS

We continue reading from Pope Francis' recent letter to the church "On the Love of the Heart of Jesus Christ."

Those moralizers who want to keep a tight rein on God's mercy and grace might claim that Therese could say this because she was a saint, but a simple person could not say the same. In that way, they excise from the spirituality of Saint Therese its wonderful originality, which reflects the heart of the Gospel. Sadly, in certain Christian circles we often encounter this attempt to fit the Holy Spirit into a certain preconceived pattern in a way that enables them to keep everything under their supervision. Yet this astute Doctor of the Church reduces them to silence and directly contradicts their reductive view in these clear words: "If I had committed all possible crimes, I would always have the same confidence; I feel that this whole multitude of offenses would be like a drop of water thrown into a fiery furnace".

To Sister Marie, who praised her generous love of God, prepared even to embrace martyrdom, Therese responded at length in a letter that is one of the great milestones in the history of spirituality. This page ought to be read a thousand times over for its depth, clarity and beauty. There, Therese helps her sister, "Marie of the Sacred Heart", to avoid focusing this devotion on suffering, since some had presented reparation primarily in terms of accumulating sacrifices and good works.

Therese, for her part, presents confidence as the greatest and best offering, pleasing to the heart of Christ: "My desires of martyrdom are nothing; they are not what give me the unlimited confidence that I feel in my heart. They are, to tell the truth, the spiritual riches that render one unjust, when one rests in them with complacency and one believes that they are something great... what pleases [Jesus] is that he sees me loving my littleness and my poverty, the blind hope that I have in his mercy... That is my only treasure... If you want to feel joy, to have an attraction for suffering, it is your consolation that you are seeking... Understand that to be his victim of love, the weaker one is, without desires or virtues, the more suited one is for the workings of this consuming and transforming Love... Oh! How I would like to be able to make you understand what I feel!... It is confidence and nothing but confidence that must lead us to Love".

In many of her writings, Therese speaks of her struggle with forms of spirituality overly focused on human effort, on individual merit, on offering sacrifices and carrying out certain acts in order to "win heaven". For her, "merit does not consist in doing or in giving much, but rather in receiving". Let us read once again some of these deeply meaningful texts where she emphasizes this and presents it as a simple and rapid means of taking hold of the Lord "by his heart".

To her sister Léonie she writes, "I assure you that God is much better than you believe. He is content with a glance, a sigh of love... As for me, I find perfection very easy to practise because I have understood it is a matter of taking hold of Jesus by his heart... Look at a little child who has just annoyed his mother... If he comes to her, holding out his little arms, smiling and saying: 'Kiss me, I will not do it again', will his mother be able not to press him to her heart tenderly and forget his childish mischief? However, she knows her dear little one will do it again on the next occasion, but this does not matter; if he takes her again by her heart, he will not be punished".

So too, in a letter to Father Adolphe Roulland she writes, "My way is all confidence and love. I do not understand souls who fear a friend so tender. At times, when I am reading certain spiritual treatises in which perfection is shown through a thousand obstacles, surrounded by a crowd of illusions, my poor little mind quickly tires; I close the learned book that is breaking my head and drying up my heart, and I take up Holy Scripture. Then all seems luminous to me; a single word uncovers for my soul infinite horizons, perfection seems simple to me. I see that it is sufficient to recognize one's nothingness and to abandon oneself like a child into God's arms".
