ABOUT THE COVER

This week, we find that the king of kings is revealed not on a throne of gold but as a shepherd who searches out the scattered, binds up the injured, strengthens the weak, and feeds his flock with justice, and that is the standard by which all nations will be judged. Ezekiel's reveals God's declaration, "I myself will search for my sheep," with a ferocity that overturns every human expectation of power, and Paul prays that the eyes of our hearts would be opened to see the immeasurable greatness of that power, the same power that raised Christ from the dead and seated him far above every rule and dominion. Jesus brings the whole liturgical year to its breathtaking conclusion: When the Son of Man comes in glory, the question put to every nation will not be about doctrine or ritual, but whether we fed the hungry, welcomed the stranger, and visited the prisoner — because whatever we did to the least of these, we did to him.
