
MAVI SOFA

MAVI SOFA

Mavi begins with the absence of excess. Its design is defined by broad lines and a quiet presence, with each plane seemingly distilled to its simplest expression. The arms extend forward with the same generous proportions as the seat and meet the backrest in a continuous composition, creating a piece that needs no complex contours to make its presence felt.

There is something deliberately relaxed about its proportions. The upholstered surface follows the structure, with subtle variations that reveal the material and invite a closer look. Loose cushions add a sense of spontaneity to the composition, while its low, deep form maintains a contemporary aesthetic. Mavi does not seek the rigidity of a perfect form. Its precision lies in allowing that form to feel natural.

Comfort comes without mechanisms, without hidden movements, and without the need to transform the piece to find another position. It is a stationary sofa designed for lingering—a place to sit for a moment or settle in for hours, alone or with others, with the freedom to occupy the space without the design dictating a single way to use it.

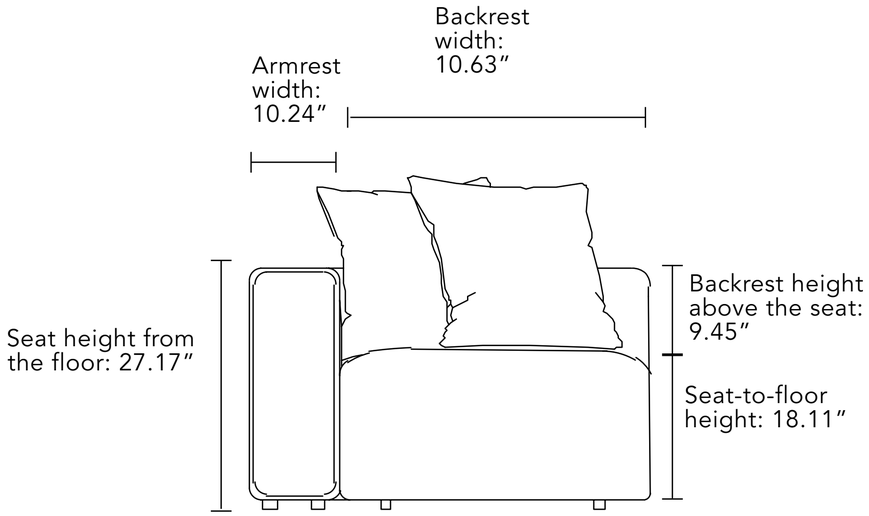

Mavi has the rare quality of not competing with the architecture around it. It finds its place within it, establishes a sense of proportion, and remains. It is a sofa that finds its strength in what needs no embellishment: volume, material, scale, and time. Its simplicity is not the absence of design, but the result of taking design to the point where it no longer needs to explain itself.
