

Get to know your school-based therapist

Lindsay Wootton

MA, AT, LPC

Meet Child and Adolescent Behavioral Health's Lindsay Wootton, who is the school-based therapist at Alliance Middle School.

Lindsay, who graduated from Jackson High School, went on to earn her bachelor's degree in psychology and art from The Ohio State University and her master's degree in art therapy and counseling from Ursuline College.

Lindsay said the best part of her job is watching the kids she works with grow and make progress towards their goals. Lindsay loves being there to encourage and support them (the kids) while they learn to express and manage their feelings and expressions.

Hobbies: making art and hiking with my dog

Favorite book: The Giving Tree

Favorite movies: FernGully: The Last Rainforest

Child and Adolescent Behavioral Health's (C&A's) school-based consultation services include behavioral health screening and referral, crisis intervention, student social/emotional skill development and behavioral health and wellness education, community linkage and referrals, parent/guardian engagement/education, CARE team meetings and collaboration with school staff. When indicated, students may receive formal diagnostic and treatment services, provided at the school, by the school-based therapist.

- Students are referred to counseling by school staff and CARE teams to screen for mental health or substance issues
- Parents are asked to be engaged in the process
- C&A will assist with linking families to community resources as needed.
- C&A's clinical staff collaborates closely with school staff to enhance a supportive social/emotional school environment
