More than 60 years of faith
"To restore all things in Christ"

January 18, 2026

Dear Friends,

There is a point in the Mass right before the distribution of communion when the priest raises the eucharist slightly above the paten or chalice and says: "Behold the Lamb of God, behold him who takes away the sins of the world. Blessed are those called to the supper of the Lamb." This short phrase echoes the words of St. John the Baptist when he points to Jesus after baptizing him and says: "Behold the Lamb of God, who takes away the sins of the world." With these words, the Baptist draws attention away from himself and directs it toward Jesus. This is consistent with his disposition, which recognizes that his ministry is not about himself. His ministry and his very being is to bear witness to Christ. Would that we all see our lives in this way?

Just a few days ago, I saw a feature in the news about a 104 year-old World War II veteran by the name of Dominick Critelli, who was given the privilege of playing the National Anthem on saxophone at a hockey game on Long Island. The performance was straight-forward with very little flourish, and it brought a rousing response from the attendees. His patriotism was very evident and infectious. I, too, was moved by his rendition.

I have to admit that I find it somewhat rare these days to hear a rendition of the Star Spangled Banner that I like. Too often, the people performing add some type of distinctive flare to the anthem to showcase their talent. They make it about themselves. Unfortunately, a lot of performers don't realize that the anthem isn't about them. It is about showcasing the defining qualities of our nation, and that our freedoms were hard-fought by countless brave individuals who desired to preserve them. It is a tribute to our flag, which represents the unity of a nation that was built upon those freedoms. When the anthem is sung plainly and patriotically, it expresses the unity and the values that lie at the heart of who we are as Americans. Those are the truly rousing and inspiring renditions.

What we see in the gospel reading this weekend is the humility of John the Baptist who recognizes precisely who he is. He sees his place in the big picture as one whose existence is to point the way to the Lamb of God - Jesus. This attitude is very appealing. John has given the purpose of his life to make known the presence of the One who takes away the sins of the world. I think we all are very much aware of what happens when someone makes everything about themselves. When we see a humble person, however, we are inspired by their life, and their virtue challenges us to live in the same way.

The challenge for us is to ask whether or not our lives bear witness to Christ. Does our attitude and way of living inspire others to seek Christ? During the Mass, we are given the invitation when the priest says, "Behold the Lamb of God . . ." It is an invitation to look outside ourselves and see that the Lamb of God who is presented before us is our very life and the very purpose for our existence. Do we point the way to him in every aspect of our being?

The response to the invitation at Mass is very aptly, "Lord, I am not worthy that you should enter under my roof, but only say the word and my soul shall be healed." By saying these words, we echo the humility of the centurion who proclaimed them when he requested Jesus heal his servant. We are but humble instruments, but all Jesus needs to do is say the word, and we shall be healed. In the big picture, it is not about us. It is all about Christ.

It is hard to let our ego step aside so that Christ may shine. So frequently our ego wants to be fed, and we want attention drawn to us. This kind of ego never fulfills the promise we think it makes. Our pride always leaves us wanting. The humility that draws attention to Christ is the ticket to true joy. God bless!

School News

Blue Jay Families,

As I reflect on my journey at St. Pius X, all my different roles as a student, parent, teacher, principal, and parishioner, I am continually reminded of the profound impact this community has had on my life and the lives of my family. The beauty of our shared mission in both school and parish has been a constant and formative blessing.

With our annual Enrollment season now underway, I feel compelled to share my personal story with you. My own Catholic education began here as a sixth grader, new to the experience. I was warmly welcomed and received my sacraments in seventh grade under the guidance of Sister Barbara Bluntzer. I then continued my formation at Incarnate Word Middle School. These foundational years in Catholic education shaped the person I am today and instilled in me the values I hold most dear.

Inspired by my own experience and that of my husband, we chose the same path for our children. Our family's story at St. Pius X School and Church has been one of unwavering support, academic excellence, and spiritual growth, which has been a narrative for which I will be forever grateful. If given the choice, I would make the same decision again without hesitation. My profound thanks go to every teacher and staff member who poured knowledge, care, and genuine love into my children's formation, a commitment that continues to touch their lives even now.

If you are discerning where to entrust your child's education for the coming school year, my recommendation is clear. To echo the words of our dedicated second-grade teacher: This is the "World's Best" School. While teachers and classrooms may change from year to year, the consistent dedication to loving formation and academic excellence remains our hallmark. St. Pius X will steadfastly continue its mission for generations to come.

I warmly invite you to experience our community firsthand. Please join us for our Open House on January 25th, following all Masses.

RSVP for the Open House here: <https://bit.ly/OpenHouse125>

You are also welcome to explore the activities planned for National Catholic Schools Week. Learn more and view our event schedule here: <https://app.smore.com/n/y9fqk>

Thank you for considering St. Pius X as your partner in your child's education and faith journey.

God bless,
