

- 1) Given that intellectuals have spurned Christianity for decades, why do you think New Atheism experienced such difficulty sustaining a committed following?

- 2) Humanists assert the Christian truth of inherent human rights. Why then are people in our humanist-influenced society experiencing a crisis in meaning and questioning their own value?

- 3) Tom Holland asserts that societies outside of Christian influence do not naturally care for the oppressed. Is this persuasive? Will this be useful to you in apologetic conversations?

- 4) Intellectuals have proclaimed the incompatibility of science and Christianity for years and many people believe them. How would you go about encouraging someone to see them as compatible?

- 5) How have you convinced yourself of the literal truth of the Bible? Are you comfortable exposing your own doubts and methods with someone who is still wondering?

- 6) Some Biblical assertions rest only on God's authority and cannot be independently proven. As a logical thinker, how have you gotten comfortable with revealed truth and supernatural causes?
