Hello Redwooders and Neighbours,

If you are anything like me, we welcomed the holiday season, enjoyed it, ate so many good treats, celebrated with wonderful friends and neighbours...and now I'm ready to forge ahead in 2023.

I would like to acknowledge and express gratitude for the amazing people who live in our community. Just off the top of my head, in the past year, I can think of neighbours and friends who have brought my family food and treats when we were struggling (or for no other reason than to be nice), who have fixed my clothes dryer when I thought I would need to buy a new one, who have been supportive of my family's journey in foster care by donating time, clothing, toys, and mentorship, and who have helped with driving when my schedule was overloaded. We have neighbours who planned cul de sac potlucks and pumpkin carving events, and who organize the community to participate in athletic events or to volunteer. Other neighbours are so great about planning get-togethers so I can remember to have fun and not just go about my daily routine.

In short, we live in an awesome community with truly special neighbours. My family tries to reciprocate as best as we can, but we'll never be able to give as much as this community has given to us. Thank you Redwood for making this such a great place to live!

REDWOOD MEADOWS EMERGENCY SERVICES

Hello 2023!

2022 saw your volunteer firefighters invest almost 15,000 hours in the community responding to calls, attending training/courses, and being ready on standby shifts. Other fire department activities such as administration, inspections, and attendance at community events are not included in that number.

At time of writing, Redwood Meadows Emergency Services (RMES) has attended nearly 400 calls in 2022— one of our busiest years since the floods in 2013. Almost half of the calls were medical in nature, a quarter of the calls were for rescues including vehicle accidents, approximately 20% were for fires, and the rest were “other” (wires down, trees on house, vehicle lockouts, hazmat, etc.)

Additionally, RMES members issued 72 burn permits and conducted 52 FireSmart assessments, six firepit inspections, and two home safety surveys.

It continues to be an honour and a privilege to serve Redwood Meadows and the surrounding community.

Until next month, stay safe.

BRAGG CREEK WILD: LIVING WITH WILDLIFE IN OUR ALBERTA WINTER

Many of our wild neighbours have disappeared from our lives for a few months, some hibernating, some in a state of “torpor” (such as bears), and some who have migrated to warmer climes until spring.

But there are still lots of them around, and unfortunately the ones who stay put can come to be seen as a nuisance in winter. Squirrels, for example, are on the lookout for food sources, and can often be seen raiding bird feeders—more on that later. Racoons (yes, they’ve been spotted in Bragg Creek and Redwood Meadows very recently) are infamous raiders of garbage bins.

Obviously, we can avoid encouraging potential nuisance visitors by using the same caution we use the rest of the year, like being careful with garbage. “Nuisance” occurs where humans and wildlife have unwanted encounters. There’s a range of causes for negative interactions with wildlife, but there’s a lot we can do to mitigate them: some long term, some immediate.

According to most recent figures, human population on our planet reached 8 billion in November 2022. But we’re only one among 8 to 10 million other species on the planet, according to biodiversity expert Andrew Gonzalez, speaking on CBC radio about the United Nations Convention on Biological Diversity COP15 “30 by 30” biodiversity initiative. All species have a role to play in the complex network of life on the planet, though sometimes what they need to do to get by can seem to get in the way of what we humans want. That’s when we sometimes see them as a “nuisance”.

Habitat loss and fragmentation lead to increased wildlife presence in human residential areas, whether in the city or smaller centres like Redwood Meadows and Bragg Creek. At policy level, we can work to ensure wildlife corridors are respected when planning development. When we are making changes to our individual properties, we can ensure we don't block them with impenetrable fencing, for instance, or that we don't chase them away with excessive human activity.

In the short term, though, there's a lot individuals can do by following guidelines like:

- Don't leave attractants lying around – keep garbage etc. locked up in sheds and garages.
- Don't feed wildlife – that way they won't become habituated.
- Allow wildlife free passage through the landscape so they can move on easily.

Winter is a time of scarcity for wildlife, a hungry time. Even moose and deer struggle, grazing where they can on twigs, dry grass, bark and other brush. They need to conserve precious energy by doing as little as possible. In the winter we can help wildlife by "leaving the leaves", allowing brush piles to offer shelter to smaller mammals, not disturbing them when they need to conserve energy – exercise patience on the roads and the trails (don't scare them so that they have to run off).

Many of us feel that we can help birds that stick around in the winter by feeding them. The truth is that birds have survived Alberta winters for many millennia without human help. Those who are not evolved to withstand this cold, fly south. If we can't resist the urge to leave food for them, though, we can observe a few key pointers to make sure we don't cause problems for those birds:

- Keep cats indoors so they don't pose a threat to birds coming to our bird feeders.
- Put bird feeders away from the house, so the birds don't mistakenly fly into windows.
- Use feeders that don't allow squirrels and the like to get into them.

Let's stay alert to what will harm and what will help our wild neighbours at this time of year!

As always, if you do sight wildlife—either alive or not—please report it using our online form. This is so useful for us to know where to focus conservation efforts, and we particularly want to keep tabs on animals killed on our roads at this time of year.

PICAPIX PUZZLE

A picture will evolve as you complete the puzzle. Start with the largest numbers or combination of, colour in squares and proceed to work back and forth between columns and rows.

The three basic rules are:

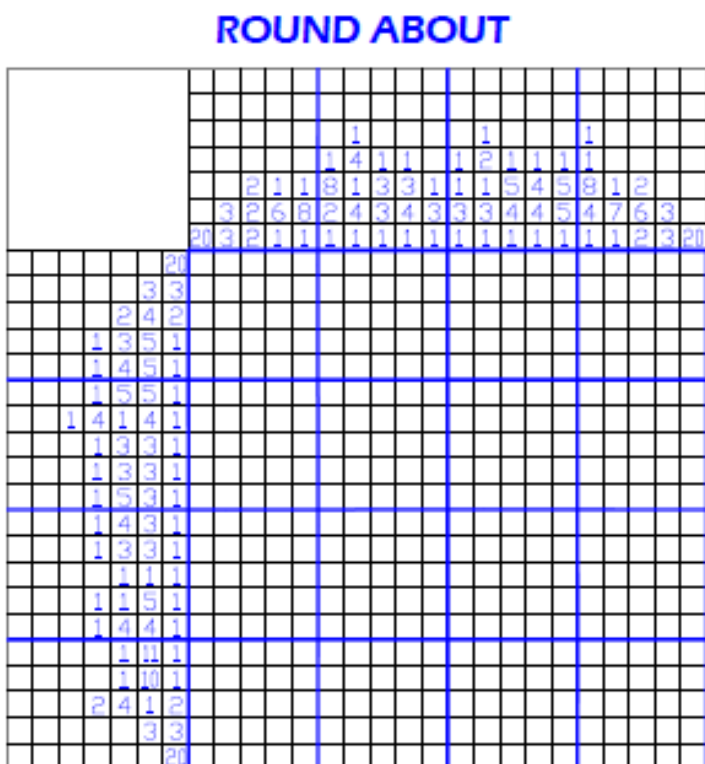

1. Numbers represent how many squares you colour in to form a group or block.
2. Leave at least one square between these blocks.
3. The sequential order of the numbers is the order of the blocks, i.e., top number for a column is the top, block, and left-most number for a row is the left-most block.

The “logic count method” shown below is very useful: The clue at the left of the row is 6, so count 6 squares from the left to right and then count 6 squares from right to left. Confidently shade in the overlapping squares.

This same method can be applied even when there is more than one number, remembering to allow one empty square between groups or blocks. Use a second colour for elimination of background squares.

MORTGAGE MATTERS: TO LOCK IN OR NOT?

On December 7th, the Bank of Canada made another 50-basis-point increase to its benchmark rate in its final policy rate announcement of the year. This marks the first time this rate has surpassed 4% since 2008 and the seventh consecutive rate jump this year. This corresponds to a current prime lending rate of 6.45%.

Given the recent Bank of Canada rate increases and the comment “will be considering whether the policy interest rate needs to rise further”, there is no easing of concerns for more increases yet to come. Many are wondering if they should be locking in their variable mortgage rate. Higher variable rates were inevitable, but no one anticipated the speed and pace that has occurred.

Many are pondering ... should I lock into a fixed rate now?

If continued increases--and/or the increases that have already happened—are affecting your sleep-at-night factor, then it may be worth locking into a fixed rate. Losing sleep and stressing out over a mortgage rate is not worth it, perhaps a more stable payment for your peace of mind is just what you have to do.

Besides the sleep-at-night factor, other important considerations are:

- What is the true effect of more variable rate increases on your monthly cash flow?
- What is the current cost of fixed rates?
- Will your current lender even allow you to switch into a fixed rate? If so, at what rate? Any fees?
- If fixing with your current lender, what are the fixed rate prepayment penalties and terms/conditions?
- What is the penalty cost to break your current variable rate mortgage?
- Are you anticipating any major life events? Will you be moving or refinancing soon anyway?

Switching to a new lender may provide:

- Better terms and conditions, which is just as important as the interest rate.
- More suitable features, like splitting into a multi-mortgage product or adding a line of credit.
- Some lenders have promo rates or cash rebates.

But the downside is you will have to re-qualify with any new lender.

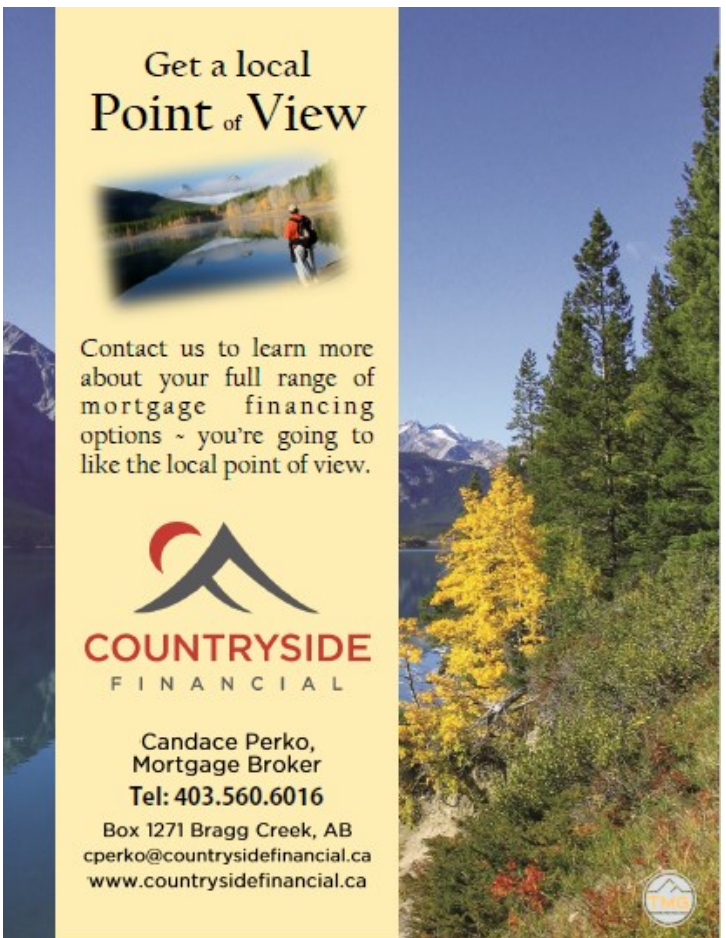

If you've decided to lock-in, get started:

- Contact your current lender and see what their best fixed rate to lock in will be. Make sure to ask about any additional administrative fees or additional costs you may incur. Lenders may require you to lock in for 5 years or at least the balance of your term (if you are in year two of a 5-year term for example, you must lock in for at least 3 years).
- Contact your favourite mortgage broker armed with that information. A trusted broker can advise if you should stay with the current lender or if there are better rates and terms elsewhere.

It is important to remember that history has shown that those who stay the course with variable rates have saved more interest costs over time. Just like stocks, markets move up and down and sticking it out long-term has proven the better savings over fixed rates.

The next scheduled date for announcing the Bank of Canada overnight rate target is January 25, 2023.
