& Hal Straus

For years BPD was difficult to describe, diagnose, and treat.
Authors offer professional advice to help people and their families understand and cope with this troubling, and shockingly widespread disorder. Originally published in 1989, first addition available digitally to read, and third addition audiobook, for free through the Libby ap with your Warrick County Library card.
Also available for purchase
through providers like kindle.

Elite Volunteer Spotlight: Paula S!

As a native Hoosier, Paula grew up in Boonville. She, her husband, all four children, and two of her grandsons are alumni of Boonville High School, with one grandson currently enrolled at BHS. To Paula, Warrick County is home, and very dear to her family. Her hobbies include staying connected with family and friends, traveling, gardening, reading, and even gaming a little on her phone.

As a mother of four, grandmother of nine, and a life-long volunteer, Paula actively participated in organizations for her children while working. She was involved with PTOs, Girl and Boy scouts, worked as a CPA, and was a board member of Indianapolis CASA. Since her retirement, she has been an advocate and volunteer in Warrick County. Paula gravitates toward supporting children with her free time, adding, "Our children are our most precious future resource. Protecting and nurturing them is so very important."

Paula has been involved with Warrick County CASA a few months short of nine years now, and in several capacities. Currently she acts as a dedicated member of the Compassionate Crew helping to keep items organized and stocked for advocates and our families, as well as other support-related tasks. Without Paula's time and dedication, our stockroom and supplies would not be as accessible. As a board member of "Indiana's Kids Voice" (Indianapolis CASA), Paula saw the dedication and passion of the volunteers who acted as the voice for children in court. Inspiring her and set the bar for the type of volunteer she wanted to be when she retired. When asked what she felt is most rewarding about participating with CASA, she answered: seeing children from her former cases happy, healthy, growing, and thriving today. Advice she would give to a new volunteer is this, "Get to know your children. Gather the facts. Consult with your volunteer coordinator. And then be the most informed and best voice you can be for them in Court."
