

Design Committee

The Design Committee is charged with ensuring that properties within our neighborhood are maintained to preserve property values.

Committee members review and approve applications for outdoor changes to residents' homes and yards.

The Design Committee endeavors to preserve the developers' original intent: to create a carefully planned subdivision that would provide an attractive place to live and to conserve the natural beauty and character of the area.

Eaglewood was developed with strict standards for home design and color, as well as landscaping. The original plans for Eaglewood, for example, did not allow for privacy fencing.

Design trends change over time, along with innovations in building materials. It can be a balancing act to honor the developers' intent and, at the same time, allow for change and individual taste, and that is the challenge the Design Committee embraces.
