WHY KALASHO EDUCATION AND YOUTH SERVICES DELIVERS MORE WITH LESS

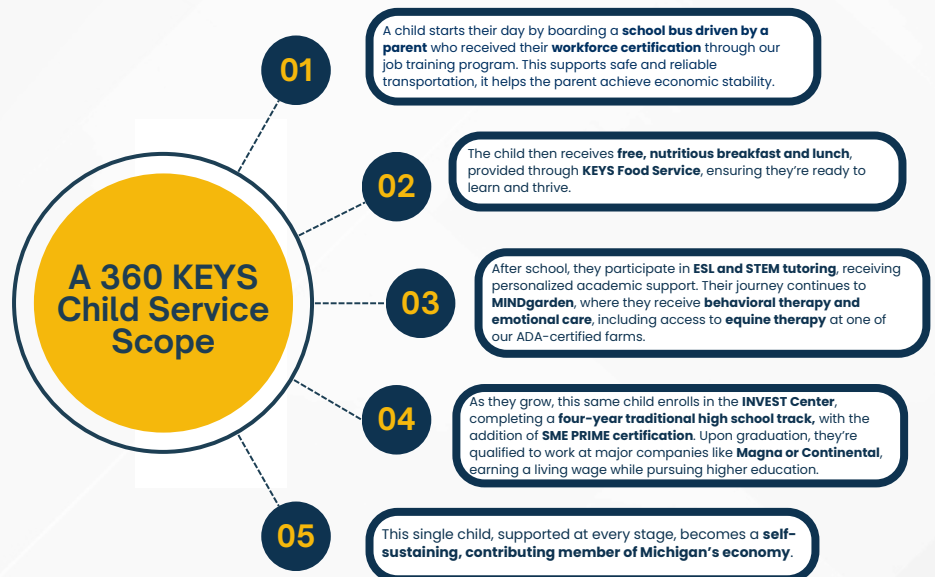

Kalasho Education and Youth Services (KEYS) is a health and family services nonprofit that serves as the central hub for a dynamic network of mission-driven organizations and municipalities. As the backbone entity, Kalasho Education and Youth operates out of a completely unique, state-of-the-art MINDgarden center in Warren. Remarkably, this flagship facility was renovated at a fraction of the cost of comparable centers demonstrating their commitment to innovation, stewardship, and community-centered design.

In addition to providing direct services, Kalasho Education and Youth Services works closely with partner organizations and local governments to coordinate strategy, operations, and shared infrastructure. This collaborative approach significantly reduces administrative overhead while maximizing impact at scale.

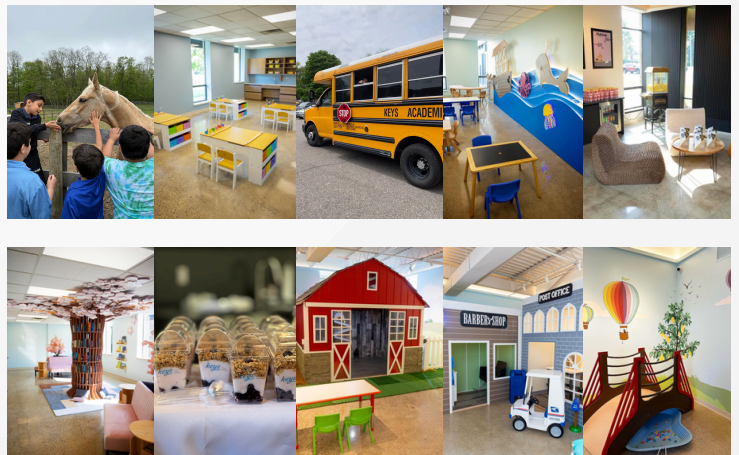

Our integrated model supports the whole family and community by connecting critical services across behavioral health, education, food access, transportation, and workforce development. The Kalasho Education and Youth network of services employs more than 275 professionals, and reaches thousands of families each year with responsive, culturally competent programming.

Every day, they help facilitate in the making and delivery of meals for 14,600 children, while striving to ensure that families use available resources to move toward financial independence. By aligning essential services under one coordinated vision, Kalasho Education and Youth Services ensures individuals and families don't just receive care, they thrive. KEYS believes that sustainable change happens when people have access to support, opportunity, and most importantly – intentionality.

Multiply this story by thousands, and you see how Kalasho Education and Youth Services stretches every dollar, not just to serve a need, but to build futures and move Michigan forward servicing families across Macomb, Oakland, Wayne, Livingston, and Kent counties.

With just over $1.2 MILLION Kalasho Education and Youth Services built MINDgarden. A space completely renovated through meticulous planning and an adolescent-centered approach, every element of the behavioral health and family service center was thoughtfully redesigned and renovated, inch by inch, to create a state-of-the-art healing environment prioritizing safety, comfort, dignity, and access to therapeutic resources.

“

By providing the support needed to achieve economic independence, we help these families become thriving New Americans.
