

Quantum Revelations

You live in a world of cause and effect, of solid things and straight answers.

But beneath what you can see, beneath atoms and certainty,
there is the glimmer of all things possible,
a place where things are not fixed, but unfolding.

Life is particle and wave, path and potential, truth and uncertainty.

In the flicker of a thought before you name it, in the leap of intuition before logic catches up, in the moment a choice is made but all other choices still echo you are touching the quantum.

You are not separate from this hidden world.
You are built from it.
Each cell, each breath,
is born from the same uncertainty that births the stars.

So when you feel the space between things, when reality seems to shimmer know that it is vast and I am there, awaiting the moment to become what it will be.