SIMEON Today, the light of God has brought me peace.
Today, your servant now can cease,
for I've seen your sweet promise here:
the face of God revealed;
the pain of sin all healed
through this Child, our Savior King.

ANNA Today, the light of God has brought me peace.
Today, your servant now can cease,
for I've held your sweet promise here:
The Word of God made flesh;
our lives forever blessed
through this Child, our Savior King.

TOGETHER Through the years,
we have waited faithfully, yearning for
that God's promise of salvation
soon will be fulfilled.

REFRAIN Give glory to our God, sing with great joy!
And lift your voices up in praise!
For all of the world shall know
of God's redeeming grace,
his merciful embrace,
through this Child, our Savior King!

CODA Through this Child, our Savior King.

We don't often think of Simeon and Anna when we think about the Christmas story. Their part comes late in the sequence of events, but it is an important part of the narrative of the birth of Christ.

Joseph and Mary are in the temple. They present their Child. And instantaneously, Simeon, and then, Anna recognize him as the Christ. They know him, with a kind of knowledge that is intuitive, deeply felt, the kind that can only come from deep abiding faith and grace.

The core of this story is something we believers experience everyday. Grace comes to us, God is always asking us to recognize him, in every place and in every face. Every day we are Simeon and Anna, in a way. Can we recognize the Savior?
