For October, we asked you to share pictures of your completed past NAME Day projects.

Here are the beautiful submissions.

From Preble McDaniel:

The first ever NAME Day was held in 2010 and I decided right away what I wanted to do. I wanted to put 1:48 scale items into a 1:12 scale hutch. I ordered my kit and left out one of the shelves to accommodate the taller items. To decorate it, I used pieces I cut from a notepad paper some of which I used my computer to make longer. To that I added some dots to enhance the design. To furnish it, I drew upon my many swaps I have received over many years. It was fun “shopping” in my boxes of swaps.

From Terry Unnold:

Here are a couple of my NAME Day projects for the challenge. I still use the butcher block island in photos to show off mini food all the time and I consider the hutch to be a very rare piece in my collection of minis since it is finished!

From Jean Ellsworth:

This is my 2015 Completed NAME Day Project. It was a very fun project and a great way to display some of my favorite flower arrangements that I have collected over the years.

From Dorothy Hamilton:

She created her craft room using NAME
Day projects.

From Carolyn Eiche:

All are in 1/4" scale. The Tiki Bar from 2021

The hutch from 2010

The kitchen work table from 2011

The alcove from 2012

From Susan Watkins:

This is my favorite NAME Day project -- I made the structure following Cat Wingler's article in the Gazette. I also made all the flowers using my own punches or laser cut petals from SDK or Mary Kinloch.

I made this with a friend online, she in AL and me in TN. We had a lot of fun collaborating and I think of her when I look at it. This was one of the first times I made quarter scale flowers. Our club used the cart in a 1 inch scale 'flea market' corner box which we displayed at the Nashville convention.

From Ruth Goodger:

This is my half scale craft room.

From Julie Stuckmeyer:

My 2016 1/4" scale Going Bunkers kit.

From Jackie Browder:

Last year's NAME Day Tiki Bar.

From Diane Fisher:

Here is my tiki hut from last NAME day.

From Jane Holbrook:

Here's my Tiki Hut from last year.

This is my She Shed in which my desk and sink are found.

From Christiane Starks:

This is my 1:48 room box with the 2019-2020 NAME Day projects. I used the printables from Quarter Connection and bits from Debbie Young's kits to finish the room box.

This is one of my favorite projects!

From Pat Creagh:

I often include the NAME Day project with other vignettes. This is the 2013 cart.

This is the 2014 cozy corner.

This is the 2017 armoire.

The 2019 & 2020 craft room.

Here's the 2021 tiki bar.

And finally the 2022 display box.

From Suzanne Spooner-Munch:

Here are my interpretations of recent NAME day kits.

I decided to reinvent the tiki hut into a beach shell 'n board shop, replacing the fringed roof with an inverted bread basket. The palm tree was made with the help of a Create.com video.

The clock shop, "Tempus Restorum", contains my first encounter with a NAME day project. The craft table kit became the perfect clock repair bench for my clock maker. And yes, I made most of the clocks.

From Mae Karoli:

Several years ago at a convention garage sale, I purchased this roombox kit that was one of the souvenirs from the 2006 houseparty "Tell Me a Story". I had it for several years before deciding to create a craft room using the NAME Day kits from 2019, the craft table, and 2020, the sink, base cabinet, and overhead cabinet. I designed and made new book covers based on miniature and craft themes. The floor is scrapbook paper. I purchased several other craft related kits including the tall craft cabinet, file cabinet, paper holder, wood holder, pegboard, bulletin board, and desk accessories.

From Lesia Lennex:

These photos show my NAME Day cart.
Completing all the flowers and the cart was a wonderful experience. I can't believe how well it all came together! This is 1/4 scale kit from SDK.

From Suzie Aguilar:

From Cheryl Polito:

I was lucky enough to belong to N-1 region and I don't remember who set up the Noah's ark scene, but as soon as I saw it, I knew I wanted it. At the time of the first NAME day, I was working full time and my kits were stored away and I just barely made it this summer. I loved putting it all together and am pleased with my hutch.

From Rita Crawford:

My club's first NAME Day project.

From Margaret Gordus:

Name Day 2019 & 2020 -1/12" Scale

From Jackie Williams:

From Vicki Scidmore:

These are three of my favorite projects. The hutch is in a Christmas kitchen and the cart is all Mary Engelbreit. The quarter scale Tiki Hut was given to a friend who loves vintage Hawaiian.

From Kathy Koons:

This is my Craftroom that included a couple of NAME Day projects put into a QC room.

From Chris Ernst:

I made several of these but this is the only one that I know where it is.
