BROCHURES | BOOKS | VIDEOS | WEBSITES

We understand there are many questions that you may have when discussing or planning funeral arrangements. Please understand you are not alone and we are here to help you.

We have prepared this Available Resource Guide which contains a list of brochures, books, videos, and websites to better help you.

Our aim is to provide a varied source of information which touches on the many aspects of funerals from pre-planning to traditional services and cremation considerations. We are also pleased to provide grief resources to help as well. We also can provide materials available on unique types of grief, such as the loss of a spouse, child or suicide.

All of our brochures are available free of charges. Books and videos can be loaned for a period of one month (or longer if needed) and the websites are links that you can search from the privacy of your own home

It is our goal to help you. If you have a topic you are interested in learning more about, please contact us and we will do our best to assist you in any way we can.

WHY CHOOSE A FAMILY OWNED FIRM

Discusses the advantages of choosing a family owned and operated firm over corporate conglomerate firm.

DO YOU KNOW WHAT A FUNERAL DIRECTOR DOES FOR YOU?

Discusses the importance of working with a licensed funeral director. Covers the licensing requirements and training required for licensure. You should feel comfortable calling on your funeral director at any time - to discuss pre-planning, to ask for guidance when death occurs in the family, or to inquire about special programs and help available afterwards, including grief counseling.

HOW MUCH DOES A FUNERAL COST?

Whether pre-need or at-need, this brochure discusses the costs related to funeral services and discusses creating memorable, unique services that are cost effective.

Getting Through

A gentle guide through funeral preparation
From the publishers of My Duty

GETTING THROUGH

This gentle guide through funeral preparation includes basic information on what funerals are, why you should work with a licensed funeral director, the types of services funeral homes offer, a glossary of terms and a unique checklist for persons to complete. There is also a section which offers assistance to help grieving persons.

THE CHOICE IS YOURS

Many options are available when planning funeral services. This brochure discusses and defines the types of services that a funeral home can provide to create a meaningful, personalized service.

EXPLAINING PRE-ARRANGING TO YOUR AGING PARENTS

One of the most difficult conversations family members have to have with their loved ones is about end of life decisions. This brochure offers tips to help start the discussion.

WARNING SIGNS TO WATCH FOR WHEN SHOPPING FOR A PRE-NEED FUNERAL OR BURIAL PLAN

More and more people are making the choice to plan ahead for their own funerals. This brochure identifies warning signs that families should watch for when exploring pre-arrangement.

PRE-PLANNING A FUNERAL... YOUR RIGHT TO CHOOSE

This pamphlet provides answers to the following questions:

- Why Would anyone pre-plan their own funeral.
- I've already received phone calls about pre-planning, are they legitimate?
- Do I have to buy everything individually?
- Should I shop around?
- Where do I start?
- How do I know who to look for?

FUNERAL ARRANGEMENTS IN ADVANCE... THE DECISION ONLY YOU CAN MAKE

You and your loved ones can have peace of mind by taking the time now to make your wishes known. This brochure discusses how preplanning works and defines SecurChoice, a pre-need funding program through the Pennsylvania Funeral Directors Association.

FUNERAL PREARRANGEMENT

When we lose a loved one, the last thing we want to do is think about all the emotional and financial decisions of funeral planning. Instead, wouldn't it be nice if it was already taken care of? Planning ahead is a gift only you can give...a final act of love for those you care about the most.

RESOURCES FOR THE JOURNEY OF GRIEF® BROCHURES

Available upon request at no cost

Resources for the Journey of Grief is a series of informational brochures that focuses on educating and supporting families and community professionals on the needs of grieving children and families.

The purpose of the brochures is to help parents, as well as teachers and other professionals who work with children, to be better equipped when interacting with grieving children.

These user-friendly brochures, brief and easy-to-read, and available without cost, capture the essence of the issues and provide guidance in supporting a grieving child or adult.

See inside for descriptions of each of the brochures.

The Spiral of Grief

"Once I began this process, I had no idea how I was going to proceed. It was like going blindly down a road that I had never been on before."—Shari, Caring Place

What is grief about? What can I expect—for myself or for someone I know who is grieving? Does it ever get better?

Even though everyone's grief is unique, some patterns can be noticed. The insights and experiences of many children and adults shared over many years at the Caring Place are distilled in this set of three short brochures, providing an understanding of the feelings and experiences of the grief process, as well as reasons for hope that healing is possible.

Grief is more than just sadness or missing the one we love, but what else is involved? What does grief look like? What does grief feel like?

Here is an overview of grief, from shock, anxiety and feeling alone, to an understanding that grief is the natural and normal response to a broken heart.

Grief is the process of discovering what it means to live without someone who has been woven into our lives.

These painful feelings can be productive, as they allow us to move toward healing and a reconnection to life. Feeling our feelings is a way of saying "yes" to ourselves.

As we travel our journey of grief, it's important to remember that hope and healing are possible.

This healing can be helped by sharing feelings and memories, especially with those who support us by listening to us and accepting us where we are.

"Grief is love never, ever ready to say goodbye."
—Rabbi Dr. Earl Grollman

Questions

Grieving children are filled with questions, many of which are difficult to answer. What lies behind some of the most common questions, what is it that the children are seeking, and how can we best provide it?

When a grieving child asks a question, ultimately the conversation that results—the connection made with the child—is more important than the answer. Learn about connecting with, listening to, and validating a grieving child.

Teenagers are old enough to grasp more of the implications of death, and to feel their grief and their loss very profoundly. Their deepest questions revolve around their identity now that the person they love has died, where they fit in the family and in the world, and how to cope—with life, and with their own feelings.

Preschool Children

Young children also grieve—in fact, anyone old enough to love is old enough to grieve. Although they may not have all the words to be able to express their feelings and questions, they're looking for safety and security. Find out more about the needs of preschoolers, as well as how their needs can be met.

Grieving & School

How can a grieving child be supported at school? What can a teacher or principal do to understand and help the child? How can other students be prepared for the return of a grieving classmate? These and other issues are addressed in The Grieving Child in the Classroom.

Funerals

Saying goodbye is difficult, for children as well as adults. But it's hard to know what's best for a child after someone they love has died. Should a child attend a funeral or other ceremony? Should the child view the body? Are they old enough to understand? How can children participate in the funeral? How can they be prepared? See what those who have been through the experience think about questions like these.

Anticipatory Grief

When a family member is faced with a life-limiting illness, we all want to make sure that the children will be OK. When, what and how to tell the children about the diagnosis are addressed, as are some of the many ways in which life-long connections can be created with the children.

Helping a Friend

When a friend has experienced the death of a loved one, how can we help them? This brochure aims to provide answers to that question, focusing on the needs of both teens and adults. It takes a look at what a grieving person feels, what we can say, or avoid saying, and what we can do to help.

Taking Care of Yourself

In the midst of the chaos that is grief, especially when we're trying to care for others grieving around us, it's hard to even know what to do to take care of ourselves. Here are a number of suggestions for ways of caring for yourself as you grieve.

Holidays, and other special occasions like birthdays and anniversaries, often seem to intensify the already hard feelings of sadness and pain after a death. Thoughts gathered from Caring Place families about coping with special days are shared in this brochure.

THE CHOICE IS YOURS.

THE PROCESSION

The procession to the final resting place is a powerful symbol of mutual support and a public honoring of the deceased. A procession and committal may take a variety of forms:

- Procession to the grave for burial
- Procession using special vehicles, such as a motorcycle hearse, antique car, horse and carriage, truck, or tractor
- Procession to the crematory for a brief family service (if possible)
- Procession to a niche in a columbarium (using an urn ark carried by pallbearers)
- Procession to an ossuary or place of scattering
- Procession to embrace the immediate family and offer condolences
- Optional procession to view the body
- Procession to lay a flower on the casket
- Other creative and meaningful ideas

A well-planned, personalized funeral service is a fitting celebration of the life that has been lived.

A MEANINGFUL SERVICE

Following a loss, a funeral or memorial service provides much needed closure to loved ones. Usually, a healing funeral service incorporates three basic elements:

- A gathering
- A ceremony with religious or spiritual overtones
- A procession to the final resting place

Any or all of these aspects of a healing funeral or memorial could be used to help a family begin to cope after a loss.

Each aspect of a healing funeral or memorial meets a specific need of family members, helping them acknowledge the reality of death, give and receive support, face the pain of loss, search for meaning, and honor the memory of the one who died.

When planning ahead, it is important to find a balance between the needs of the family for closure and the wishes of the deceased.

THE GATHERING

The gathering allows family and friends to receive love, comfort, and support from one another in an informal setting. A gathering may be anything from a fellowship meal, to a visitation, viewing, wake, and/or private family viewing. Gatherings may include several different elements, such as:

- Viewing the deceased publicly, privately, or optionally
- Display of photos and mementos
- Memorial video tribute
- Memory sharing time
- Rosary or prayer service
- A shared meal

A public gathering helps the family begin to acknowledge the reality of the loss as they spend time together sharing, laughing, and grieving.

THE CEREMONY

The ceremony honors the memory of the one who has died through a special tribute to his or her life. The ceremony may include any of the following components:

- A focal point
 - The presence of the body in a casket
 - The presence of the cremated body in an urn
 - A memorial portrait
- A celebration of life
- Eulogy or other public reflections
- Music, readings of sacred texts, poems, and inspirational quotes
- Cultural traditions, symbols, and rituals
- Military honors, lodge rites
- Memorial video tribute
- Memory sharing time
- Candle lighting, balloon release, dove release, or other meaningful events

The ceremony helps family and friends face the pain of their loss and process their emotions. Ceremonies often incorporate appropriate spiritual or religious overtones, offering loved ones hope and comfort as they search for meaning in the loss. Be sure to share your ideas for personalizing the funeral with those you love.

IT'S UP TO YOU

A funeral is an important moment in the lives of your loved ones. For that reason, it is important to provide a plan of action...because our loved ones only have one chance to get it right!

A well-planned, personalized funeral service is a fitting celebration of the life that has been lived. At absolutely no charge, our prearrangement specialists can help you plan your service down to the last detail, offering your loved ones a healing and meaningful funeral experience. It's all about what is best for you and your family. Truly, the choice is yours.
