

ABOUT THE FOUNDER

SummitBridgeCapital LLC

Aman Ehrari

Who He Is

The founder of SummitBridgeCapital is the only person who has walked in every pair of boots on the battlefield:

· Role player and cultural advisor at 29 Palms, Camp Pendleton, Camp Lejeune, Fort Irwin, JRTC, and Hawaii—training Marines for wars he had not yet fought.
· Deployed translator attached to Marine infantry in Helmand Province, Afghanistan—completing the same 29 Palms workup as the troops he served alongside.
· The man who got off the helicopter at Kajaki FOB when other translators refused to leave the aircraft.
· The contractor whose "Dubai" was Leatherneck—flying not for vacation, but to bring his team cigarettes, dip, and sweets to boost their morale.
· A green card holder who became a U.S. citizen—paying a debt of gratitude to the country that gave his mother a second chance.

His Mission

"I trained them. I became them. I stayed when others quit. Now I built this company to give my soldiers the training they need to come home."

SummitBridgeCapital exists for one reason: to ensure every American soldier, Marine, and service member receives culturally accurate, tactically sound, ground-truthed training—built by someone who has been in their shoes, in the rain, in the dirt, on the line.

The Difference

Others	Him
Lived at Leatherneck	Lived at Kajaki
Flew to Dubai	Flew to Leatherneck—for his team
Quit when it got hard	Stayed when it got real
Read about the enemy	Was shot at by the enemy
Trained from a book	Trains from experience

The Story They Will Tell

He does not need to speak his own praise.

When the time comes, a Marine will see him—at a briefing, a base, a networking event—and point.

"That's him. That's the guy who got off the helicopter at Kajaki. That's the one who brought us cigarettes from Leatherneck. That's the translator who stayed."

That moment is worth more than any proposal.
