Kislev—Tevet 5786

From My Desk... Happy Holidays/ Serious memorials

On Saturday night, November 8th, Apollo's Fire Baroque Orchestra and Chorus presented a moving tribute. Jeannette Sorrell, Apollo's Fire brilliant conductor, wrote, "This Requiem Concert is dedicated in memory of all the innocent victims- especially children - who have perished this year in conflicts around the world." The program consisted of serious musical works, including selections from Mozart's Requiem, An African American Requiem (by Damien Geter), An Ancestor's Requiem (by Eric Gould), Five Freedom Songs (by Jessie Montgomery), and Voices of 1791 (by Jeannette Sorrell).

To be fair, the program was entitled, Mozart Requiem and Exsultate, jubilate. David Walker, managing director of Severance Music Center wrote, "...our featured composers' evokes personal journeys through grief, to hope, to joy." Clearly, this was not to be a presentation of only lugubrious music, designed to evoke tears of sadness. Rather, it was designed to reflect sadness, then provide relief, and propel listeners to hope, and then to joy.

It was a stellar concert. The energy, timing, and heartfelt efforts of singers, musicians, and conductor were palpable. It was a musical tour-de-force.

And yet, I left the concert with a strange feeling that something was amiss. Hundreds of attendees- some dressed in their finest -sat in comfortable chairs in Severance Hall, thrilled by the music. At moments of deep emotion (including moving renditions of elegia) the crowd applauded the chorale and singers. At the conclusion of the concert, the crowd erupted in a standing ovation, with cheers and whistles filling the auditorium. There was no doubt the audience had heard a world-class performance.

What could be amiss? The concert was in memory of tens of thousands (perhaps more, given the underreported conflicts around the world) of innocent victims who had died cruel deaths. And the audience had spent two hours in air-conditioned comfort, some even imbibing cocktails and other pleasant drinks at the intermission, enjoying an evening of "entertainment". Was this a proper way to remember innocents who have died as a result of conflicts and wars? Would the innocent victims have been pleased to know that audience members enjoyed great music, with drinks available, and then left the hall for perhaps a late night dessert at a cafe? These are haunting questions.

Yet another event this past week made me uneasy. A Holocaust education group invited the public to join them at a dinner. The purpose of the event was to highlight the vital work that this group does, and to persuade others to support it. Indeed, my father-in-law (obm) was very active in this very group, and helped launch it 65 years ago.

The dinner was held at a synagogue, and, while the food was quite good, it was not an "over the top" menu, as is sometimes the case with catered events.

WITHIN THE SYNAGOGUE

Certainly, simpler food was entirely in order. Remember that Holocaust prisoners would never have eaten anything close to even the simple, but fine food that was served that evening. One could suggest that any event related to the Holocaust should not involve food at all. But, let us not be too self-righteous.

However, a comedian had been invited to entertain the guests. Leaving aside the propriety of some "off-color" jokes, the whole idea of a comedian appearing at a Holocaust education event seems to be incongruous, at best. Again, I do not wish to sound sanctimonious. Yet, again, the question is haunting. What would Holocaust victims have said, had they been told that 80 years after Auschwitz, Jews would assemble for dinner and jokes, in order to emphasize the importance of Holocaust education?

I write these words not to castigate anyone in particular. Indeed, I have great admiration for those who work hard to keep the memory of the Holocaust alive, and educate the next generation about our need to be ever vigilant. I have tremendous regard for musicians who seek to express raw emotions through music.

But, I can't help but feel that innocent victims would not find comfort in knowing that after their deaths, concerts with drinks will be held in their memory. That comedians will tell jokes at commemorative events. Perhaps I am too sensitive about the whole thing. But, I'd like to think that when innocent Jews die, my people will never joke at their memorials, or vigorously applaud music played in their memories.

On the other hand, Jews are known as comedians and humorists. And that's great. Perhaps the time and place for applause and jokes should be better timed. Like, for example, Hanukkah. Our tradition has established as a delightful holiday the victory of the Jewish people over assimilation. I'm all for that. Music, singing, applause and joking are all in order. Let's enjoy it!

Please accept my best wishes for a Happy, musical, and light-filled Chanukkah !

*Warm regards,
Rabbi Seth Sternstein*

CANDLE LIGHTING

On Erev Chanukah, we light the first flame, and each night after, we add an additional light until the eighth night, when eight lights are lit.

The Hanukkah candles should be lit
At sunset or afterwards.

The candles are placed in the Menorah from right to left, and the flames are lit from left to right, with today's flame being lit first.

The reason we first kindle the light which had been added that evening is to show that the greatness of the Miracle increased on each successive night.

Friday, December 19th

Menorah is lit before the Shabbat Candle

Saturday, December 20th

Menorah is lit after Havdalah

"During such a difficult, frightening moment for Jews around the world, this compelling book will bring you hope."
—SHERYL SANDBERG, founder, Lean In

FOR SUCH A TIME AS THIS

On Being Jewish Today

ELLIOT
COSGROVE

Rabbi Elliot Cosgrove, a leading voice in modern Judaism, discusses his poignant exploration of what it means to be Jewish today. Rabbi Cosgrove shares the urgent circumstances under which the book was written following the October 7th attacks in Israel, and how it explores the complex dynamics of Jewish identity, antisemitism, and solidarity in a time of crisis. The conversation also touches on the renewed sense of communal belonging among Jews worldwide, the moral clarity and challenges that emerged after the attacks, the many faces of antisemitism (overt violence vs. more subtle exclusionary forms), and the rising tensions both outside and within the Jewish community. When asked if he feels hopeful, Rabbi Cosgrove admits it's difficult in the short and medium terms, but affirms that to be Jewish is to hold on to hope.

Cake and Coffee will be served

Copies of the book will be available at the Temple to purchase for those who are interested.
