GET TO KNOW DUTCH BOX LACROSSE

Support the Dutch national box lacrosse teams, as they gear up for an exciting journey to the 2024 World Championships in Utica, New York. A tournament that symbolises the unique, century-old bond between the Netherlands and the United States of America.

The Creator's Game

Lacrosse - traditionally called 'the Creator's Game' - has been played by native American people for thousands of years. It's a team sport, whereby players use a stick with a net to pass the ball and score goals. The more fast-paced, indoor version of traditional field lacrosse is called box lacrosse and is played on a smaller, enclosed surface. Known for its intensity and physicality, it promises a thrilling experience for players and spectators alike.

A unique milestone

The journey of the Dutch national teams to the World Championships in Utica, New York (20-29 September 2024) is a unique, symbolic milestone for many reasons.

First, it marks the inaugural women's tournament on the world stage, allowing our women to be at the forefront of promoting and growing a sport built on foundations of mutual respect and friendship.

With Haudenosaunee Neal Powless as a coach of the Dutch team, we honour the historical bond between the Dutch and the Haudenosaunee that is enshrined in the Two Row Wampum. This peace covenant was made over four centuries ago, when the Dutch first set foot on Turtle Island (now America), and played a significant role in the birth of New Amsterdam (later New York). 2024 marks the 400-year anniversary of the city's foundation.

Help us grow!

In the Netherlands, box lacrosse is still in its infancy, especially compared to North America. Our dedicated national team athletes juggle full-time jobs or studies while training to play world class lacrosse and organising the sport from bottom-up, all this with minimal support. As such, they seek support not only to ease their financial burdens but also to fuel the sport's development from grassroots to national recognition.

Supporting the Dutch box lacrosse teams is a unique opportunity to be part of the growth of a new sport in Europe. We offer various sponsorship packages as well as the opportunity to discuss custom arrangements, allowing you to choose the level of involvement that best suits your brand or organisation.

With your support, we can elevate box lacrosse in the Netherlands, inspire the next generations of athletes and nurture the historical Dutch-American ties.

Bedankt voor uw steun & see you in the box!
