The Foundation for the Advancement of Clinical TMS announced that Palisadian author and mental health advocate Diana Daniele joined its board in November.

“We are delighted to welcome Ms. Daniele to our board,” said Dr. Randy Pardell, FACTMS president. “She brings her immense and infectious energy, as well as both keen knowledge of and direct experience with transcranial magnetic stimulation. We positively anticipate the release of Diana’s memoir, which describes her moving mental health journey culminating in her finding TMS, which ultimately healed her treatment-resistant depression. Her book will provide inspiration and comfort for those who suffer from this devastating illness.”

FACTMS, established in 2022, has a mission to “support education and research relevant to transcranial magnetic stimulation, raise public awareness of TMS therapy and its benefits, and to increase treatment access, especially in underserved areas worldwide.”
