"Anything that harms the dignity of life destroys the beauty of the earth. Human endeavor and care for creation go hand in hand, therefore all labor exploitation is a plundering of the environment," Pope Leo said in his homily.

"Social peace and ecological equilibrium go hand in hand, so violence against people is violence against the earth, and violence against the earth is violence against human beings."

St. Elizabeth's Corner
Parishioners from all five parishes are invited to a Social Gathering on Sunday, Dec. 13th at 3pm at the Motsett Center near St. Paul Church. This will be an opportunity for people to begin to get to know each other. Msgr. Kruse will provide information about the Parish Merger and the work of the Implementation Committee. Bring your questions and ideas! Everyone is invited. Lets begin coming together.

Tradition has it that Cecilia, a noble Roman girl, was martyred around the year AD 230, during the reign of Alexander Severus and the papacy of Urban I. Her cult is very ancient: the Basilica named after her in Rome's Trastevere quarter, was first erected before the Edict of Constantine (AD 313) and the feast of her memory was celebrated in 545.

The power of love

The tale of her martyrdom is contained in the Passio Sanctae Caeciliae, a more literary than historical text, characterized by a strong tendency toward the legendary. According to the Passio, Cecilia was betrothed to the patrician, Valerian. On their wedding day, she revealed that she had converted to Christianity and vowed perpetual virginity. Valerian then agreed to be catechized and baptized secretly by Pope Urban I. Shortly afterward, Valerian's brother Tiburtius embraced the Christian faith. The two brothers were soon arrested by order of the Prefect, Turcius Almachius. After being tortured, they were decapitated with Maximus, the officer who had the task of bringing them to jail, and who, along the way, had himself converted.

VATICAN NEWS

The son of the man in his glory, surrounded by his angels, acts like the shepherd who separates the sheep from the goats and set the just on his right and the reprobates on his left. (…) The criterion of judgment is decisive. This criterion is love, the concrete charity to neighbour, and in particular to the "little", the people in the greatest difficult: hungry, thirsty, foreigners, naked, sick and in prison. The king solemnly declares to all that what they did or did not do to them, they did or did not do to him himself. That is to say that Christ identifies with "the least of these" his brethren, and the Last Judgment will be the account of what previously happened in earthly life. (…) This is why Jesus wishes to associate us with his kingship; this is why he invites us to collaborate in the coming of his Kingdom of love, justice and peace. It is left to us to respond to him, not with words but with deeds: by choosing the path of effective and generous love for our neighbour we allow him to extend his lordship in time and space. (Pope Benedict XVI, Address to pilgrims from the Archdiocese of Amalfi-Cava De' Tirreni, Italy, 22 November 2008)
