CST Utilities, Precise Boring of Ohio, Daystar Directional Drilling, and Chuck's Septic Tank Unite Under GRIT Infrastructure, a portfolio company of MFG Partners

Four utility contractors keep their names, crews, and customer relationships while rebranding under a newly-named parent company.

GROVE CITY, Ohio (October 15, 2026) – CST Utilities, Precise Boring of Ohio, Daystar Directional Drilling, and Chuck's Septic Tank, Sewer & Drain Cleaning (the 'operating companies') rebrand their parent company to GRIT Infrastructure. Moving forward, each operating company will keep its local brand and operate as "a GRIT Infrastructure company."

The operating companies have worked side by side, sharing equipment, people, and know-how on underground projects across Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, and Pennsylvania for years. GRIT Infrastructure gives the parent its own identity, one that reflects the work of all four companies while allowing the individual operating companies to maintain their local branding.

"We chose GRIT because it's the trait that best defines our people," said Randall P. Muench, CEO of GRIT Infrastructure. "Our crews take on difficult, dangerous underground work and deliver it on time and safely, with the quality our customers count on. That's grit, and it's what every teammate across our companies brings to the job. And when we decided to rebrand the organization to a new identity not tied to any market, GRIT perfectly captured the spirit of our company."

This announcement does not cause any changes for customers or vendors. Each local operating company keeps its name, crews, phone numbers, contracts, and points of contact. Purchase orders, master service agreements, invoices, and payment instructions stay as they are today.
