Scotland

Highlands

This Highland has a powerful appeal. The Highland distilleries and their whiskies reveal a richer, living landscape. Here, it is wise to expect the unexpected: grass, smoke, wax, tropical fruits and currants, austerity, and voluptuousness.

Glenmorangie Nectar D'or

46%

£8.50

Glenmorangie's Nectar d'Or, gold awarded 12-Year-Old whisky is finished in hand selected barriques from Sauternes: the most famous and ancient sweet wine growing region of France. This is sweet and spicy with notes of ginger, nutmeg, lemon meringue and honeycomb.

Oban, 14yo

43%

£10.00

The Western Highland representative in Diageo's 'Classic Malt' series, Oban 14yo is a superb, full-blooded fruity malt, taste of mouth-filling late autumn fruits - dried figs and honey-sweet spices, followed by a smoky malty dryness. The finish is long, smooth-sweet finish with oak-wood, dryness and a grain of salt.

Speyside

Speyside has long been the heartland of malt whisky production and because of this it is easy to assume that it makes all fall within the same group. It's not so, Speyside is all about diversity, not commonality: there is no single Speyside style just as there is no uniform Speyside landscape.

Balvenie, 12yo Double wood

40%

£7.00

One of the classics after-dinner malt, Balvenie Double wood's extra complexity and richness are a result of a second maturation in fresh sherry casks. A balance struck between evolving character and struck.

Lowlands

The mind-set of the Lowlands distiller has always been different to that of his Highland counterpart. The Lowlands became the undeniable capital of grain-whisky production, being the fastest - growing malt region in Scotland. Their whisky is large-scale, blended and urban but now it is also regaining its rural roots.
