MID-CENTURY MODERN ARCHITECTURE

Maximum 100 guests

PALM SPRINGS - 3 TO 4 HOURS

In the 1920s and 30s Palm Springs emerged as a resort destination, drawing Hollywood elites and affluent vacationers from the east. It became a playground for the rich and carefree – a reputation that enhanced its popularity and fueled its explosive growth through the 1940s, 50s and 60s.

Drawn by the growing need for homes and buildings, as well as the extraordinary desert landscape and the city's unrestrained spirit of reinvention, dozens of young architects like Donald Wexler and Albert Frey came to Palm Springs where they embarked on an extraordinary experiment. The results of this experiment were thousands of bold, innovative structures that expressed the spirit of their unique time and place and enhanced the stark beauty of the desert, incorporating the aesthetic space between sand, mountains, and sky.

On this tour, you will see the fruits of this fertile environment where the confluence of bold, innovative architects met the needs of Hollywood's elite and captains of industry for homes that reflected their hip, casual desert lifestyles in the optimistic post-war era. You will visit the neighborhoods that became known for both mid-century architecture and the famous people who called these iconic marvels "home".

The top single crop produced in the Coachella Valley is table grapes. Ninety percent of grape growers use drip irrigation, a water conservation technique that aims water directly at a plant's stalk and root. A variety of other fruits and vegetables are grown in the Coachella Valley including a variety of citrus (lemons, limes, grapefruit, oranges, and tangerines), bell peppers, dates, strawberries, artichokes, and carrots - just to name a few!

Turf, forage growth (such as hay), and nursery plantings also contribute significantly to the Coachella Valley's agriculture revenue. West Coast Turf stands as the valley's biggest producer. Turf is grown on parcels that once grew crops.

Tour includes a stop for a Date Shake at a local date farm.

From there, the trail starts to climb, winding along the ridges and switchbacks to an overlook where you can see for miles. The views of La Quinta and the hills and rocks of the area are beautiful. On this trail you feel isolated from the hustle and bustle of the valley below.

Some boulder scrambling (no more difficult than climbing stairs) is required.
