A different perspective...

I received an email last week from one of our parishioners. She wrote it in response to a recent sermon in which I shared that the Gospel, our faith, our Church calls us, as Christians, to respect the dignity of all people. With her permission I've quoted a portion of her email.

"Father, it has been very difficult to be an immigrant during these times. Many people don't understand the difference between being an immigrant and being 'illegal' or 'criminal,' and unfortunately, we are often treated as if we were one. If only people knew how much we love this country — how much we honor this flag — and that we left absolutely everything we had in our homeland to build a new life here, out of love.

If only they knew that my children know the history of the United States, not (country); they know the American national anthem, not the (country) one. They know everything about this country and almost nothing about the one we left — not because we don't love our homeland, but because, when we arrived here, we fell in love with this land and decided to live out our love for the place where God brought us. We are here to contribute to this nation's growth, and our children dream of doing the same."

How many of our children know our National Anthem?

- Fr. Devine

FAITH FORMATION

CONFIRMATION & THE GREATEST LOVE STORY EVER TOLD!

Last week, Fr. Bill created a Bible timeline and guided Confirmation students through the 46 books of the Old Testament and the 27 books of the New Testament. He showed how God's love for us is steadfast and how He continually seeks to bring us into covenant with Him. Just as He provided for the Israelites in the desert, God continues to provide for us today. In the Old Testament, the Israelites often turned away from God to follow other gods, yet God repeatedly called them back and renewed His covenant. With the Incarnation of Christ, God established a new and everlasting covenant, an act of profound love that opened the way for us to share in eternal life. Through our Baptism, we received the gift of faith that helps us walk this path. Each of us has a unique place in God's plan; we were created for this time and purpose. Strengthened by faith, we are encouraged to discover the meaning of our lives and determine God's plan for us. Share your gift of faith and help others find their way to God! - Debbie Hill, Director
