

Rising to the challenge

Good luck to all the competitors in the Man v. Horse challenge 2017

Every day, Charcroft helps customers to manufacture electronic systems which operate in some of the most challenging conditions. Our range of rugged electronics components are used in the rigs which are drilling for oil on the ocean floor and in the satellites which orbit the earth to provide data for environmental protection and global positioning. You'll also find our components in medical equipment, industrial systems, defence and aerospace electronics and in the rail industry.
