Missing & Endangered

During summer months, Missing Person cases increase due to extended time at home, increased conflict with parents and longer screen time on gaming systems and smartphones. This leads to hundreds of reported runaways each day in Harris County (Houston area). Although most cases involve a teen who wants to blow off steam, unfortunately, they become low-hanging fruit for predators who are looking to exploit vulnerable youth. Reports show that within 48 hours, 1/3 of runaway teens will be approached by a sex trafficker. Predators lure unsuspecting youth with offers of food, shelter and often substances. Once the youth is addicted to drugs, the trafficker has the ability to control and exploit them.

When calling law enforcement to report that your child is gone, it is important to use the correct wording. If you state that your child has run away, law enforcement will take a report and add it to the stack of numerous runaway cases. Communicate that your child is MISSING and you believe they are in harm's way. Of course, always be truthful and accurate when making a report.

It is important for the public to not become desensitized to the multiple Missing Person posts that fill our social media pages. We need to see these faces through a lens of time sensitivity, understanding that each day increases the probability of encountering an individual who can inflict immense damage. See Something. Say Something.

1 CALL LAW ENFORCEMENT

Call your local law enforcement immediately!
Ask investigators to enter your child into the National Crime Information Center (NCIC) Missing Persons File. There is no waiting period for entry into NCIC.

2 HAVE YOUR CHILD'S INFO READY TO SHARE

Give law enforcement all the details and circumstances that lead up to the disappearance of your child. If you feel this might have been a "trafficking" situation, please tell them that!
Know the clothing & personal items they had at the time & give any identifying marks and a current picture to law enforcement.

3 SEARCH YOUR SURROUNDINGS

Young children are prone to hide and fall asleep - check throughout the house.
If in a store, alert the manager immediately. Many stores have "Code Adam" protocols they enact.
Older children - check all digital traces: phone, social media, apps, their friends, etc.

4 MAKE YOURSELF AVAILABLE

If not you, have someone designated to answer phone calls and any additional info law enforcement may need.
Keep a notepad to jot down names, numbers and dates and times.

5 ALERT NCMEC

Call NCMEC (National Center for Missing & Exploited Children) at 1-800-THE-LOST
Ask for help and numbers of other local non-profits that might be able to help.
Ask for help with creation of Missing Persons poster to place on social media and in media.

If you feel this might be a trafficking situation please call our National Human Trafficking Family Support line at 1-833-CP-GUIDE & email us: ChildproofAmerica@gmail.com as there can be other steps and resources available.
