A MESSAGE FROM YOUR EXECUTIVE DIRECTOR

I recently found myself outside, kneeling in the dirt with the best of intentions to “get a jump on spring.” Armed with gloves I wasn’t sure had ever met soap, and a trowel that’s seen better days, I set out to conquer a small patch in my yard’s corner that felt as vast as the Grand Canyon—mostly because the work ahead looked just as intimidating.

This year, I’m trying a new approach with two of my favorite flowers—lavender and poppies. Year after year they start out bright and hopeful—lush green and full of promise—but under my watch, somehow morph into scraggly, sunburnt survivors barely clinging to life. No matter how hard I try, I can’t seem to keep these beauties alive. Past years had me rushing home from the garden center, grabbing the shovel, and excavating holes with the precision of a caffeinated mole. One year, I even mounted window boxes just for the lavender, fully convinced they’d thrive and transform my suburban ranch home into a thatched-roof English cottage. Spoiler alert: that was a lot to ask of a few pieces of wood and some plants. And me. I’d water those delicate little green hopefuls with the enthusiasm of a fire hose and fertilize like I was trying to grow a forest overnight—perhaps drowning and chemically burning them all at once.

Then I stumbled on a video where a woman explained that the secret to lavender isn’t obsessing over the plants after planting but properly preparing the sandy soil before doing so. The next part she demonstrated carefully. She backed away carefully, turned around and began the last part of caring for her lavender: ignoring the precious petals with pugnacity. So that’s my plan this year: get it done, then do nothing. The second half I’m certain I will execute like a seasoned pro.

That new perspective made the whole process feel a little more manageable—like finally learning that the garden will grow at its own pace regardless, even if I can’t always see it happening.

And that’s when it hit me—gardening, much like life, isn’t about perfection or instant success. It’s about showing up, doing what we can, giving our best, and finding joy in the process—even when things get messy or don’t go as planned. Sometimes those messy, imperfect moments teach us that stepping back and letting things unfold without interference is both the most difficult yet most rewarding part of the journey — and that’s beautiful!

You know what else is beautiful? The volunteers who give their time, energy, and heart to this community. It’s Volunteer Appreciation Month, and we want to take a moment to celebrate these everyday heroes who help our garden—our community—thrive.

So, thank you—to every volunteer, every resident, and every family—for being part of this journey with us. We’re all growing together, in all the wonderfully messy ways that make life worth it!

Sincerely,

 Executive Director

CHAPLAIN'S CORNER

Greetings once again in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ. May we give praise unto our Lord, who is worthy of all glory, honor, and praise. This is a special season, when we celebrate Easter—the Passover Lamb, who is our Lord Jesus. Not only do we celebrate His birth, but also His death, burial, and yes, the Wonderful Resurrection. According to the Word of God, He is the First Fruit of the Resurrection. Since we know He arose from the grave, triumphing over death and hell, ascended to heaven, and is sitting at the right hand of God, we rejoice in knowing that one day we also will be resurrected or raptured to meet our Lord Jesus in the air, and that He will take us to our new home, the Father's House, where we will abide.

Thank God for this great news. (John 14:1-3) The best is yet to come. May we keep the faith and never lose sight of the promises of our Lord. His words cannot lie; His words shall not return void. As the apostle Paul said, "Rejoice in the Lord always: and again I say, Rejoice!" (Philippians 4:4)

Mary Jo Taylor
A NANA'S LOVE
The Heartbeat Behind J.W. & All Her Grandchildren

Walk the halls of Legacy Village at Park Regency these days, and you'll catch a current of something special—an undercurrent of pride, hope, and love that pulses quietly but powerfully through the community. Residents gather, not just to watch a television show, but to cheer on one of their own: J.W. Griffin, a grandson, a singer, a rising star on The Voice.

For some, J.W. is a name in the spotlight, a voice that reaches across the nation with a story to tell. For Mary Jo Taylor—known simply and lovingly as “Nana”—he is something far deeper: he is the son of her daughter Stacy, and part of a family that also includes her daughter, JoBeth, a grandson she has loved fiercely since he took his first breath, and one of four precious souls who fill her heart with joy.

When people see Nana around town, they often say, “You must be so proud of J.W.!” And with a tender smile, she gently corrects them: “I’m proud of both my grandsons, and my granddaughters.” Mary Jo’s love is quiet but deep. She has always put others first without making a fuss about it. She often expresses gratitude—not just for her grandchildren, but for the men who stand beside her daughters and their children, John Griffin and Plenn Hunnicutt, who love their families fiercely and well. This spirit of love and care shapes everything Mary Jo does. Sophie, Wheeler, and Kilby—all are wrapped in her love just as tightly as J.W. Each one a unique light in her life, each one cherished and celebrated.

Mary Jo’s life has always been about nurturing. A dedicated educator, she spent decades shaping young minds at Colquitt County High School, teaching everything from American History to Student Council. Retirement came, then went, as her passion for teaching called her back to the classroom—first working with special education students, then later teaching reading. It wasn’t until 2020—amid a world turned upside down—that she finally stepped away for good. But the heart of a teacher never truly retires.

Being Nana means being present. J.W. remembers it well: “She never missed a golf tournament, baseball game, football game, gymnastics meet, cheer competition, or any other special event or milestone.”

Her presence was a quiet anchor, a steady cheer from the sidelines, often with a plate of her famous homemade brownies or a handmade sign in hand—a simple, sweet gesture that said, “I’m here. I see you. I love you.”

But Nana’s love doesn’t stop at her family. In town, she’s simply “Nana” to children of all ages—an ever-present figure in celebrations big and small. Holidays at her house were nothing short of magical: stockings overflowing, gifts piled high, birthdays marked with cake and balloons. As the grandchildren grew, she swapped candy-filled Easter eggs for money-filled ones—a clever twist that kept the joy alive and the egg hunts lively for years.

Generosity is simply part of who Nana is. While she doesn't get out shopping like she once did—no longer loading her car full of gifts for everyone—she still keeps a running list in her mind, fondly remembers her as his favorite customer, someone who gave to others even when it wasn't easy. For Nana, the true joy comes from brightening someone's day, no matter the cost.

Faith is the quiet strength beneath it all. Prayer life is and has always been a vital part of her life. The gold cross J.W. wears on The Voice—a gift from Nana years ago—is more than jewelry. It's a symbol of a family grounded in love and spiritual strength. That strength carried her through the loss of her sister Patsy in 1998 and into a new role: guardian of Patsy's daughter, Lisa. To this day, Lisa—now 63—is surrounded by family love, with Nana making sure she's included in every holiday tradition, every birthday celebration, even as family gatherings moved from Nana's house to her daughter JoBeth's.

Mary Jo's love speaks in many languages—handmade signs that appeared in the yard or held in the air by Nana's hands at events for all kinds of occasions, not just birthdays or graduations. Over the years, those signs became such a familiar part of life with Nana that they were almost taken for granted—a quiet backdrop to celebrations and everyday moments.

Now, with the signs appearing less often, they have become treasured symbols of her love, stirring a gentle nostalgia for those simple, heartfelt gestures. Alongside this, there's a tradition born from her days as a teacher: years ago, she asked the construction shop students to craft the first letter of each grandchild's name and mount them on wooden stakes, which she brought home and placed in the yard. Every Christmas since then, the grandchildren gather outside to stand by their letters for an annual photo—a simple ritual that captures the passing years and the steady love at the heart of the family. These traditions are etched in family memory, treasured reminders of a love that shows up in every corner of life.

Her grandchildren—J.W., Sophie, Wheeler, and Kilby—are bound together not just by blood but by the memories Nana helps create. Trips to Thomasville with J.W. are filled with stops that are as much about connection as routine: Jonah's for a meal, Rayann's Christian Bookstore, Al Dixon's for a quick shirt or two for the boys, The Bookshelf for Sophie's latest read, and Ally B's for a treat for Kilby. These outings are threads in a tapestry of love, stitched by Nana's steady hand.

The relationship between Nana and J.W. is a story in itself—warmth wrapped in teasing words and laughter.

"You be careful and come back to see me," she warns with a wink, "and if you're not careful, I'm going to beat you up, you understand?" Anyone who sees them together can't help but smile. Nana barely reaches J.W.'s shoulder, but her presence towers large in his life. Her advice to him? Simple and true: "Make music, but don't forget to have fun."

Since moving to Legacy Village about a year and a half ago, Mary Jo has watched J.W. share his music in small, intimate moments—guitar in hand, his voice filling rooms during his visits. Many residents have only recently met J.W., but his growing popularity on The Voice has sparked a new wave of pride and excitement. For this community, his performances are more than music—they are celebrations of family, connection, and the dreams that carry us forward. For Nana, it's never about the size of the audience. Whether J.W.'s voice carries across a national stage or fills a cozy room at Legacy Village, the real success is in the joy he finds doing what he loves.

As The Voice competition continues, the community holds its breath, united in hope and pride. Through every note J.W. sings, the love and devotion of Mary Jo shines bright—not just for him, but for all her grandchildren. No matter what the future brings, J.W. Griffin has already given us something priceless: music, joy, and a reminder of what family truly means.

And for Mary Jo—Nana, teacher, giver, and heart of her family—the greatest success is seeing all her grandchildren thrive, surrounded by love and faith, and the prayers that have always guided her, just as she has dreamed.

In the quiet moments after a visit, Nana often reflects on the stories her grandchildren will tell one day—stories not just of victories or milestones, but of the love and laughter woven through their lives. It reminds her of a song J.W. wrote, one called "The Dash on the Tombstone." It's not about the dates that mark a life's beginning and end, but the dash—the span in between that holds all the moments, big and small, that define a legacy.

For Mary Jo, that dash is full to bursting. It's in the school halls where she shaped young minds, in the birthday balloons fluttering in the breeze, in the quiet faith and fierce kindness that ripple through every corner of her family's story. It's in the music J.W. shares and the joy Sophie, Wheeler, and Kilby carry forward.

Her legacy isn't written in grand gestures or fame—it's in the everyday love that lifts her children and grandchildren, the roots she's planted deep and steady. And as J.W.'s voice carries beyond the village, so does the spirit of Nana's heart, a reminder that the dash is what truly matters—and her family's story is still being written, one beautiful note at a time. 🎵
