

10 Tips for Maintaining Your Natural Stone and Tile

1. Do not drag objects over your floors or countertops.
2. Use proper cleaners. Ask us for recommendations.
3. Attend to spills as soon as they occur.
4. Remember acidic foods and drinks can and probably will etch your marble.
5. We recommend having your granite countertops and marble vanity tops professionally cleaned and sealed at least once every two years.
6. On shower walls, squeegee after each shower and do not use any cleaning chemicals used for removing soap and lime deposits unless they are made specifically for natural stone. These products can harm your stone.
7. Glue felt to the bottom of chair legs to protect your floors from scratching.
8. Use doormats in front of your doors to minimize grit from causing wear and tear.
9. Use a separate mop for your marble.
10. When you see a problem call us. Don't try to repair it yourself.

Don't REPLACE IT... RESTORE IT

Most people think that if their natural stone – marble, granite, travertine, slate, etc. – looks bad (i.e. a bad installation, dull, stained, scratched, chipped, cracked, uneven tiles) that they can either choose to live with it or they have to replace it. When it comes to natural stone, nothing can be further from the truth. Natural stone can be restored to look brand new. Uneven surfaces can be ground flat. Broken and chipped tiles can be repaired. Stains and discolorations can be resolved. Dull, uneven finishes can be polished or honed to a uniform consistency.

The stone's finish itself can be changed from a highly polished one to a honed or antique finish or vice versa. Stone and grout can be sealed to protect it. Tile and grout can be restored like new.

We KNOW NATURAL STONE

We have a thorough understanding of marble, granite, travertine, limestone, slate and many other types of natural stone. We can resolve virtually any problem you might have and pride ourselves on educating you on the proper care and maintenance for all of your natural stone surfaces.

Frequently, customers will call us to say they have a stain on their marble, when in fact what they are seeing is actually etching in the stone. We can remove these marks, help you understand what causes your stone to etch, and show you how to prevent this from happening in the future.

Most, if not all natural stone will over time scratch and/or start to look dull, losing its original beauty. If this occurs we can restore your stone back to its original condition.

The way you clean your stone can actually affect the way it shines. Many times you are instructed to use only water on your stone, or worse yet, to use vinegar in your cleaning water. We'll instruct you on the proper care and recommend products that will keep your stone surfaces looking their best. In addition to caring for and educating you about your natural stone surfaces, we can also speak to you about the variety of finishes that are possible. Natural stone is very versatile and can be honed to a high shine, semi-gloss or matte finish. The choice is up to you!

Did you know using the wrong cleaning products can damage your stone? Avoid using any cleaning product that does not expressly state that it is safe on natural stone surfaces.
