From the Chaplain's Desk

history and crystalline shape for every snowflake. While they may appear identical to the naked eye, the chance that two snowflakes are exactly alike on the molecular level is infinitely small, as the growth process is highly variable. This variability results in a staggering number of possible snowflake designs, making each one as individual as a human fingerprint."

Which then reminded me of the uniqueness of each individual person, I mean even identical twins have their own fingerprint. I am one of four girls in my family, and we are very different in personality, and we bring different gifts into the world. Maybe you can attest to that in your family too.

Psalm 139:14 reinforces this idea, "I praise you because I am fearfully and wonderfully made; your works are wonderful, I know that full well," this verse highlights the value and significance of each of us and our differences.

I remember when I was much younger in Sunday school we would sing a song that said, "Jesus loves the little children, all the children of the world. Red and yellow, black, and white, they are precious in his sight. Jesus loves the little children of the world."

God's love isn't dictated by what we look like or what we know, and the snowflakes serve as a reminder of just how unique we all are, yet equally loved by God. We need to appreciate each other's differences and the unique gifts that we bring to the world, because we have special place in God's plan.

A few days ago, I was watching the snow fall, from my window and I wondered; Are there really 'no two snowflakes that are alike'? So, I had to look it up and google told me, "That each snowflake is formed under distinct conditions, influenced by temperature, humidity, and the presence of mineral particles, leading to a unique
