In Scripture Today

Matthew 5:13-20

Christians receive the call to be salt and light, for the gospel means to transform not merely the self or the members of the church, but the entire world. The impossibility of our living such a perfect life makes us rely on the mercy of God and the power of the Spirit.

Isaiah 58:1-9a [9b-12]

This prophetic passage is appointed as background to Matthew's words. Jesus reiterates the prophet's call to justice and the biblical metaphor of light. Christians see in Jesus the continuation and culmination of the Jewish hope for righteousness. This passage is also an optional reading for Ash Wednesday.

1 Corinthians 2:1-12 [13-16]

The "spirit of the world" that Paul writes about is precisely what Matthew is urging Christians to reject in favor of a radically transformed life in the Spirit. Christians see in Paul's description of the actions of God, Jesus Christ, and the Spirit the foundation of the later doctrine of the Trinity.
