In Scripture Today

John 10:1-10

The church understands Christ as both the shepherd and the gate, itself as the flock, and the enclosure as the church.

According to John, sheep are a communal metaphor for shared abundant life. In John's gospel are eleven passages in which the name of God, I am, is tied to an image, and today's selection includes one of them: I am the gate. Christians have seen the sacraments as the pasture for the flock.

Acts 2:42-47

Christians have seen in Luke's inspiring description a goal for the Christian life. Baptism is to lead to care for the poor and to the praise of God.

1 Peter 2:19-25

This passage from 1 Peter is moved out of its sequence so that the reference to God as shepherd in verse 25 fits with the dominant metaphor of the day. Beginning the reading in verse 19, omitting the verse addressed to slaves, exemplifies the task of the lectionary: to select biblical passages that have relevance of the contemporary Christian community. The whole community is now guarded by Christ the shepherd.
