In Scripture Today

Luke 13:10-17

Perhaps, like countless old women throughout time, this woman had osteoporosis. But we all know about the condition of being bowed down by age, infirmity, or distress. In Christ we can stand upright. The sabbath controversy presents us with not only the question of how is God truly honored, but also the picture of Christ who replaces the sabbath, the one who sets us free.

Isaiah 58:9b-14

The passage from second Isaiah relates to both of Luke's points: we are not to point the finger at those whom we imagine are suffering a punishment from God; and our religious practices are meant to honor God, not to serve our own interests. When Christians hear about water in the city, they think of baptism in the church, and when we hear about being fed, we think of holy communion.

Hebrews 12:18-29

This selection from Hebrews presents a complex picture of Christian worship. Here on earth the church is caught up to the heavenly city of God. Thanks to Christ the mediator, worshipers are not to fear the "blazing fire" of the Exodus; yet God is still "a consuming fire."
