

At-a-Glance Guide to Funeral Expenses

If the prospect of pricing a funeral has you feeling a bit overwhelmed, this quick guide can help organize your options.

1 Professional Services

Includes the expertise of your Funeral Director – everything from making your wishes a worthy reality to preparing the deceased with dignity and grace. Assistance provided by the Bradshaw staff is also covered in this category.

2 Facilities and Equipment

As you would expect, not everyone uses our facilities the same way. This category allows us to tailor cost individually.

3 Transportation

Use of a hearse for transporting the deceased is the most common expense in this category. However, we also plan for circumstances in which death occurs some distance away – be it out of state or out of the country.

4 Merchandise

This category includes a range of items, caskets, urns and vaults. Also memorial books and folders.

5 Cash-advance Items

On your behalf and as an added convenience, we typically pay a range of service-providers with a check on the day of the funeral. Examples include the florist, escort, clergy, soloists, and cemetery services. Cash advances are billed to you without markup.

6 Cemetery Plot or Mausoleum Niche

Please contact your cemetery of choice to purchase these items.

Bradshaw Columbarium Niche

Adjacent to our Celebration of Life Center in Stillwater, the Columbarium graces an outdoor setting that creates tranquility and invites reflection. If you are interested in more information, please ask us.

One of the most important considerations when choosing cremation is the role of the memorial gathering. The prices that follow are organized around two varying settings.

VISITATION OR SERVICE FIRST FOLLOWED BY CREMATION

Because families tend to be scattered geographically these days, many are opting to gather for a service with the body present. This allows a time to say goodbye for those who come from a distance. Following the service, the body is cremated. Graveside services or scattering ceremonies are then scheduled for a later date.

CREMATION FIRST FOLLOWED BY MEMORIAL OR GRAVESIDE SERVICE

Since cremation precedes any gathering, the memorial can take place at any time with the urn present if the family prefers. A graveside service or scattering ceremony can be scheduled immediately following or at a later date.

SERVICES FIRST
FOLLOWED BY CREMATION

To permit the gathering of family or friends in the presence of your loved one, these options include a visitation or service prior to cremation. Our staff prepares the body and arranges the setting with flowers and mementos you provide.

REQUIREMENTS FOR A PRIVATE VIEWING

A private viewing allows immediate family to gather around an unprepared body for a farewell prior to cremation. A private viewing is included in each of our cremation packages, with some restrictions. By law, if anyone other than immediate family will be present, the viewing is considered public and the body must be embalmed or placed on dry ice. Consequently, for all private viewings we request an advance list of the family members who will be attending.

A Note from Jim Bradshaw

We find that most families do not think twice about having a Funeral Director present for any gatherings where the body is present. However the same is not always true for a Memorial Service following cremation, with some families considering a Memorial Service without the assistance of a Funeral Director.

Yet behind the scenes is an avalanche of details – details that have the potential to become overwhelming on a day when you already have plenty on your mind and even more on your heart. If you have any doubts about the value of a Funeral Director to a Memorial Service, please consider the list below. It includes just a sampling of the many of the things we do for every family and will be pleased to do for you as well.
