Understanding Service Costs

We pride ourselves on being one of the funeral homes offering the best service in the area, given our level of professionalism, quality of facilities, and ethical standards. We are not a "discount" funeral home and as such, we do not offer discounted service. Providing ultimate service to our families is our number one priority. Consumers and families finally can learn first hand that there are differences between funeral homes. Today, simply being good is not good enough. We trust that this service will give you one more reason to give the Neville Funeral Home serious consideration when seeking a funeral home that is pro-actively working towards providing you the highest standards of services and facilities while offering creative and unique solutions for your best value. In doing so, Neville Funeral Home is pleased to provide you with a full disclosure of our service charges. To help you understand funeral costs, we have prepared an outline of the categories that make up a funeral account. There are basically five sections that make up the total funeral account:

Professional Service Charges

Professional and staff services is the funeral home staff funeral staff for arranging and conducted the selected service, including facilitating the arrangement meeting, preparing all required documents, setting up the selected service, conducting the service and 24-hour on-call assistance. Staff requirements for a separate day of visitation and funeral service is more involved then a direct cremation without a visitation or funeral, for example, which is why there would be a cost difference when comparing service fees.

Preparation and Embalming

Preparation of the body is usually divided into two sections: embalming, which includes all necessary equipment and time required and other preparation, and other handling of the body, which may involve dressing, casketing, hair styling and cosmetics. The main reason why there are usually two parts is if a family chooses not to have embalming done, there is still the work required for basic handling of the body..

Facilities and Equipement

Charges include items such as: general building use (arrangement offices, business offices, preparation area, initial sheltering of the body from the time of transfer to either the time of visitation or transportation to a crematorium.; use of the funeral home for visitation and funeral; use of the building, parking and required equipment such as chairs, picture boards and flower stands, etc.

Documentation and Stationery Supplies

Charges include items such as: record keeping and clerical assistance, including preparation and filing of permits required by the government, Funeral Director's Statement of Death certificates, and other required documents; preparation and delivery of obituary notices; provision of benefit information and other helpful information; obtaining a signed medical certificate: maintaining funeral home records and, depending on the service, providing a register book, memorial cards, and thank-you cards. This fee will vary depending on the type of service selected.

Automotive Requirements

Charges include items such as: use of vehicle and equipment to transfer the deceased from the place of death to the funeral home within city limits; use of specialized vehicle to transport casketed remains to church, cemetery or crematorium; vehicle to transport clergy and/or pallbearers during the funeral service; use of vehicle for errands and other tasks related to services (flower delivery, pick up death certificates, etc.)

Casket and Merchandise Selections

This section is specific to the casket or cremation container that a family selects. Most of our caskets, cremation containers and merchandise is priced separately - meaning the price you see for the casket is for the casket itself with no other items included that can sometimes become confusing to families. We also provide packages with our ceremonial (rental) caskets that are used for cremation. These packages include a ceremonial casket, cremation container, and a choice of urn.

Some of the other types of merchandise you might find in this section of the funeral account are: Burial Vaults, Cremation Urns, Cremation Jewellery, Limousines, and Stationary packages.

Why Pre-arrange?

This is just one of the many benefits to wise planning

Plan out your wishes

Funeral prearrangement simply means that by planning now you can ensure that your funeral reflects your personal lifestyle, customs and beliefs. You can determine your wishes in advance and record them with a licensed Funeral Director. We understand that this is a difficult issue to talk about, but when making pre-arrangements this is the time to ask questions, receive clear answers and determine the cost.

Support and guarantee your wishes

While there is no requirement to prepay when you make your funeral prearrangements, it does make sense from a financial standpoint. Prepaying your funeral eases the financial burden that can surround unprepared families and friends at the time of loss. The principal and all interest remain on deposit until the time of death to cover the increases in cost due to inflation. Any excess funds will be refunded to your estate and all money is guaranteed, safe and secure

Communicate your wishes

It is important to discuss the funeral prearrangements with your family and or executor, and have the information readily available for their use. Our Funeral Home members can supply you with a inspiring guide to documenting your wishes. Contact your nearest Funeral Home to have a guide send to you with no charge or obligation.

Give yourself the peace of mind that comes from knowing you are prepared for whatever the future will bring.
