“Build Love, Not Walls ”

By Fr. Joseph Juknialis

In Robert Frost’s poem “Mending Wall,” he tells how each spring he meets with his farming neighbor, and the two of them walk along on either side of the stone wall that marks their property to replace the stones toppled by the ice of winter. His neighbor loves the idea of a wall, inspired by his father’s advice that “good fences make good neighbors.” Frost, however, is not convinced and keeps suggesting that “something there is that doesn’t love a wall,” as if walls are not intrinsic to God’s creation.

We humans seem to like our boundaries. As children, we divide ourselves between girl germs and boy germs and draw imaginary lines in the back seats of cars. Later, we build walls everywhere—the Great Wall of China, the Berlin Wall, the structures at Mexico’s border, backyard fences, and gated communities. We set up national boundaries, build emotional walls, relegate people to ghettos and the “other side of the tracks.” We differentiate among religions, arguing over which is God’s preference. We seem to use walls rather than love to give us our identity.

Some Scripture scholars suggest that this Sunday’s gospel event was a turning point where it became clear that Jesus came to save not only the Jewish people, but all people—believers and unbelievers alike. Seeing the Canaanite woman’s faith, Jesus willingly cured her daughter. With God, there are no boundaries or walls—not those of nations, not those imposed by languages and customs, not those we use to divide people of faith.

With God, there are no boundaries or walls.

“Construye amor, no muros”Por el P. Joseph Juknialis

En su poema “Mending Wall”, Robert Frost narra cómo cada primavera se reúne con su vecino agricultor y juntos caminan a ambos lados del muro de piedra que delimita su propiedad para reemplazar las piedras derribadas por el hielo del invierno. A su vecino le encanta la idea del muro, inspirado por el consejo de su padre de que «las buenas cercas hacen buenos vecinos». Frost, sin embargo, no está convencido y sigue sugiriendo que "hay algo que no ama las paredes", como si las paredes no fueran parte intrínseca de la creación de Dios.

A los seres humanos nos gustan nuestros límites. De niños, nos dividimos entre gérmenes de niñas y gérmenes de niños y trazamos líneas imaginarias en los asientos traseros de los coches. Más tarde, construimos muros por todas partes: la Gran Muralla China, el Muro de Berlín, las estructuras en la frontera de México, las cercas de los jardines y las urbanizaciones cerradas. Establecemos fronteras nacionales, construimos muros emocionales, relegamos a la gente a guetos y a la "otra parte de las vías". Diferenciamos entre religiones, discutiendo sobre cuál es la preferida de Dios. Parece que utilizamos muros, en lugar del amor, para definir nuestra identidad.

Algunos estudiosos de las Escrituras sugieren que el episodio del Evangelio de este domingo marcó un punto de inflexión en el que quedó claro que Jesús vino a salvar no solo al pueblo judío, sino a todas las personas, creyentes y no creyentes por igual. Al ver la fe de la mujer cananea, Jesús curó voluntariamente a su hija. Para Dios no existen límites ni muros: ni los de las naciones, ni los impuestos por idiomas y costumbres, ni aquellos que utilizamos para dividir a las personas de fe.

Para Dios no existen límites ni muros.
